Clear sign of re-electrification; updating the GS Electric Vehicle Sentiment Map

Re-electrification is clear

The global BEV sales mix rose from 13% in February to 19% in May driven by instability in the Middle East. However, there is a regional divergence, with the most rapid BEV growth in China (up 10 percentage points) and other markets (up 6 pp). On the other hand, the BEV ratio in the US has declined by 1 pp. The growth in BEV in other markets was due to Thailand (up 19 pp) and Australia (up 6 pp). Overall, Europe was up 2 pp, but the BEV mix in Germany in particular expanded by 3 pp. It is highly likely that oil reserve conditions and rising gasoline prices are significantly impacting consumer purchasing behavior.

Price competition moderates with re-electrification

In our proprietary price survey, we observed a moderate decline in sales prices in the US and Canada, but prices in other regions have continued to stabilize or rise. We believe that the trend toward re-electrification has led to more conservative pricing strategies by emerging BEV manufacturers. However, with aluminum/naphtha/memory prices rising and a 3 pp yoy margin deterioration expected in 2026, there are currently no regions where price hikes are occurring at a magnitude sufficient to secure profitability.

Potential for major changes in the BEV supply chain

The shift to BEVs is leading to an increase in market share for Chinese BEV manufacturers. The growing share and cost competitiveness of Chinese BEVs could potentially bring about major changes in the automotive supply chain. First, discussions on the IAA (Industrial Accelerator Act) have begun in Europe, with proposals outlining the localization of BEVs to protect the regional economy. Second, traditional automakers have outlined policies for a major shift in their parts procurement strategies. In particular, Japanese automakers are actively adopting Chinese parts, or Chinese-grade parts.

Confirming the sustainability of the shift to BEVs in June-July

Anticipating the normalization of oil exports from the Strait of Hormuz, our commodities team lowered its WTI forecasts from $85/bbl to $80 for 2026, from $75 to $70 for 2027, and from $70 to $66 for 2028 (as of June 15). The global automotive sector is at a crossroads where stabilizing crude oil prices could soften

Closely monitoring IAA trends in Europe

Market access restrictions due to “Made in EU” requirements: The IAA, proposed in March 2026, mandates that 70% or more of components excluding the battery be procured within the region (Union-origin) as a condition for BEVs to be eligible for purchase subsidies and public procurement in European countries. We believe that if this regulation is implemented, it could act as a de facto non-tariff barrier against completely built-up (CBU) export models from outside the region, significantly reducing their price competitiveness. While traditional countervailing duties by the EU have primarily targeted Chinese vehicles backed by Chinese government subsidies, the IAA is based on local production ratios. Manufacturers exporting CBU BEVs from Japan and South Korea would also be equally excluded from public support.

The IAA bill aims to raise the manufacturing sector's share of GDP to 20% by 2035 (from approximately 14.3% in 2024). The schedule aims for deeper discussions in the second half of 2026, formal adoption in the first half of 2027, and implementation in the second half of 2027. Reports from the Nikkei and others have expressed concerns about the possibility of the IAA conflicting with the WTO agreement's "national treatment" principle. In the automotive industry, which has a complex supply chain, a 70% local content requirement could risk disrupting existing supply networks and consequently leading to higher vehicle prices.

If the IAA is implemented, vehicles that do not meet the local content requirements will be uniformly excluded from purchase subsidies in member countries. For example, in the case of France (Bonus Écologique 2026), a top-up bonus for vehicles equipped with European-made batteries (up to €2,000) is granted in addition to a maximum of €5,700 for low-income households, which would result in a price difference of up to approximately €7,700 per unit compared to vehicles produced outside the region. Furthermore, vehicles not covered by the IAA are highly likely to fail to meet essential conditions in vehicle procurement by public institutions. Corporate fleets and leased vehicles make up about 60% of new car sales in Europe, and many of these comply with public procurement standards, so an important addressable market could be at risk.

Rising adoption of Chinese components by Japanese automakers

The expansion of BEV sales, led by Chinese manufacturers, poses a risk to the earnings base of traditional automakers. We estimate that Chinese parts have a 20-30% cost competitiveness compared to global parts prices. Japanese automakers operating in Southeast Asia and Australia, where competition is intensifying, is moving to actively adopt Chinese auto parts. In their medium-term plans, Honda and Mitsubishi Motors have factored in cost reductions of over ¥300,000 per unit. Mitsubishi Motors is actively promoting utilization of Chinese parts manufacturers in batteries, powertrains, and exterior parts.

We note that Subaru and Mazda have not been actively adopting Chinese parts makers. Instead,-they have said they will aim for cost reductions at the platform level by carefully advancing the standardization of parts that have many specifications across vehicles, such as wire harnesses. As geopolitical risks increase, it is naturally important to pursue an appropriate balance between stable procurement and procurement cost reductions.

Cost reduction achievements at each company will not be realized overnight. Because full model changes and platform renewals are foundational (for example, transferring orders for existing models incurs additional costs such as the write-off of mold costs), the actual results will likely be visible from 2028-2029 and beyond. We estimate that Mazda, which is reaping the benefits of cost reductions earliest, has achieved a scale of ¥100,000 per unit with the CX-5 launched this year.

GS Factor Profile

The Goldman Sachs Factor Profile provides investment context for a stock by comparing key attributes to the market (i.e. our universe of rated stocks) and its sector peers. The four key attributes depicted are: Growth, Financial Returns, Multiple (e.g. valuation) and Integrated (a composite of Growth, Financial Returns and Multiple). Growth, Financial Returns and Multiple are calculated by using normalized ranks for specific metrics for each stock. The normalized ranks for the metrics are then averaged and converted into percentiles for the relevant attribute. The precise calculation of each metric may vary depending on the fiscal year, industry and region, but the standard approach is as follows:

Growth is based on a stock's forward-looking sales growth, EBITDA growth and EPS growth (for financial stocks, only EPS and sales growth), with a higher percentile indicating a higher growth company. Financial Returns is based on a stock's forward-looking ROE, ROCE and CROCI (for financial stocks, only ROE), with a higher percentile indicating a company with higher financial returns. Multiple is based on a stock's forward-looking P/E, P/B, price/dividend (P/D), EV/EBITDA, EV/FCF and EV/Debt Adjusted Cash Flow (DACF) (for financial stocks, only P/E, P/B and P/D), with a higher percentile indicating a stock trading at a higher multiple. The Integrated percentile is calculated as the average of the Growth percentile, Financial Returns percentile and (100% - Multiple percentile).

Financial Returns and Multiple use the Goldman Sachs analyst forecasts at the fiscal year-end at least three quarters in the future. Growth uses inputs for the fiscal year at least seven quarters in the future compared with the year at least three quarters in the future (on a per-share basis for all metrics).

M&A Rank

Across our global coverage, we examine stocks using an M&A framework, considering both qualitative factors and quantitative factors (which may vary across sectors and regions) to incorporate the potential that certain companies could be acquired. We then assign a M&A rank as a means of scoring companies under our rated coverage from 1 to 3, with 1 representing high (30%-50%) probability of the company becoming an acquisition target, 2 representing medium (15%-30%) probability and 3 representing low (0%-15%) probability. For companies ranked 1 or 2, in line with our standard departmental guidelines we incorporate an M&A component into our target price. M&A rank of 3 is considered immaterial and therefore does not factor into our price target, and may or may not be discussed in research.

Ratings, coverage universe and related definitions

Buy (B), Neutral (N), Sell (S) Analysts recommend stocks as Buys or Sells for inclusion on various regional Investment Lists. Being assigned a Buy or Sell on an Investment List is determined by a stock's total return potential relative to its coverage universe. Any stock not assigned as a Buy or a Sell on an Investment List with an active rating (i.e., a stock that is not Rating Suspended, Not Rated, Early-Stage Biotech, Coverage Suspended or Not Covered), is deemed Neutral. Each region manages Regional Conviction Lists, which are selected from Buy rated stocks on the respective region's Investment Lists and represent investment recommendations focused on the size of the total return potential and/or the likelihood of the realization of the return across their respective areas of coverage. The addition or removal of stocks from such Conviction Lists are managed by the Investment Review Committee or other designated committee in each respective region and do not represent a change in the analysts' investment rating for such stocks.

Total return potential represents the upside or downside differential between the current share price and the price target, including all paid or anticipated dividends, expected during the time horizon associated with the price target. Price targets are required for all covered stocks. The total return potential, price target and associated time horizon are stated in each report adding or reiterating an Investment List membership.

Coverage Universe: A list of all stocks in each coverage universe is available by primary analyst, stock and coverage universe at https://www.gs.com/research/hedge.html.

Not Rated (NR). The investment rating, target price and earnings estimates (where relevant) are removed pursuant to Goldman Sachs policy when Goldman Sachs is acting in an advisory capacity in a merger or in a strategic transaction involving this company, when there are legal, regulatory or policy constraints due to Goldman Sachs' involvement in a transaction, and in certain other circumstances. Early-Stage Biotech (ES). An investment rating and a target price are not assigned pursuant to Goldman Sachs policy when this company has neither a drug, treatment or medical device that has passed a Phase II clinical trial nor a license to distribute a post-Phase II drug, treatment or medical device. Rating Suspended (RS). Goldman Sachs Research has suspended the investment rating and price target for this stock, because there is not a sufficient fundamental basis for determining an investment rating or target price. The previous investment rating and target price, if any, are no longer in effect for this stock and should not be relied upon. Coverage Suspended (CS). Goldman Sachs has suspended coverage of this company. Not Covered (NC). Goldman Sachs does not cover this company.
