We reiterate our positive stance on strong order intake and encouraging developments in North America. We expect further margin recovery with better product mix in 2H26.

Sieyuan announced 1H26 preliminary results. Revenue grew 27%, and net profit grew 15% YoY, below our expectation due to 1) FX losses on Rmb appreciation; 2) higher minority interests from the Toshiba JV, as Toshiba increased its stake to 30% from 10%. We cut our 2026-28 net profit by 8-10% to factor in these variances and higher R&D expenses. Our DCF-based PT falls to Rmb237.00 from Rmb286.50. We remain OW, and believe the fundamental setup is turning more positive into 2H26.

Robust order growth, plus a breakthrough in North America. We estimate domestic orders will grow >25% YoY and overseas orders 50-100% in 1H26. Country mix is shifting towards developed markets, which is positive for margins. As a global shortage of power transformers persists, we believe Sieyuan can accelerate its order intake in North America sustainably. In addition, capacity ramp-up towards 4Q27 will allow it to take more high-value overseas orders. We expect overseas transformer orders to exceed Rmb6bn/10bn in 2026/27, compared to ~Rmb4bn in 2025.

New product development to provide revenue upside. Sieyuan has been actively expanding its product offerings in the past decade. We see the following new products as the most promising to further boost its revenue in the next five years: 1) 1000kV GIS and 35kV switchgear in China. 2) UHV DC products, especially converter valves. We expect Sieyuan to obtain small orders in 2026, and make further breakthroughs in 2027. 3) Supercapacitors, which we expect can pull up Sieyuan's topline by a low single digit, but the upside can become much greater if 800VDC becomes standard for data center power supply.

Accelerated earnings growth in 2H26. We expect 36%/31% YoY growth for revenue and net profit in 2026, respectively, with a flat GPM. This implies 42% net profit growth in 2H26, as product mix improves with more recognition from 750kV GIS and overseas transformers.

Valuation and catalysts. Sieyuan is trading at 21.5x 2027E P/E and 0.7x PEG, at a ~30% discount vs. global peers' average P/E of 30x. Our new PT implies 32.0x 2027E P/E and 1.0x PEG. Key catalysts include: 1) 3Q26 results, revenue growth and GPM to pick up as product mix improves; 2) updates on HK IPO.

Earnings and PT changes

We keep our revenue forecasts for 2026-28 largely unchanged, backed by Sieyuan's solid order intake. However, we lower our net profit estimates by 7.7%/9.6%/10.1% to Rmb4.1bn/Rmb5.8bn/Rmb7.6bn for 2026-28E, respectively, mainly to factor in: 1) FX losses in 2026 due to Rmb appreciation; 2) higher minority interests from the JV with Toshiba, in which Toshiba increased its stake to 30% from 10%; 3) higher R&D expenses to support new product development.

Our DCF-based price target is lowered by 17.3% to Rmb237.00, following our earnings revision. Our model captures long-term cash flows for 2027-37. We use a WACC of 7.5%, which reflects a CoE of 9.5%, using a beta of 1.2, a risk-free rate of 2.1%, a risk premium of 4.5%, a China premium of 2.0%, an after-tax CoD of 4.5%, a target debt-to-capital ratio of 40%, and 1% terminal growth.

Our bull-case value is Rmb311.20, implying 96% upside, and our bear-case value is Rmb120.90, implying 24% downside. Our bull-case value is based on 35x 2027E P/E, justified by higher earnings growth. Our bear-case value is based on 20x 2027E, with more conservative growth assumptions.
