Publicis: The flywheel is alive and kicking - Why has the share price outperformed other "AI losers"?

“The flywheel, when properly conceived and executed, creates both continuity and change. On the one hand, you need to stay with a flywheel long enough to get its full compounding effect. On the other hand, to keep the flywheel spinning, you need to continually renew, and improve each and every component.” Jim Collins

PUB flywheel is alive and kicking - Forward visibility into 2027 1H results were in line, and PUB was able to nudge up its FY organic growth outlook to 4.5-5% despite Sapient continued drag. CEO A. Sadoun indicated the 1H budgets wins would bring 200bp of revenues on a full year basis, of which only 50bp to be recognized in 2026, and 150bp in 2027, bringing a forward visibility historically not seen in the sector, and a contribution to OG similar to those consistently seen in 2024-25-26. We note a healthy balance between “new” gains and a very strong retention track record (not being up for review in the first place is better than having to compete with peers). MSD growth allows to re-invest in talent and skills, lending credence to the company objective to extend current trends beyond 2026.

The AI debate is not settled so why has PUB outperformed other “AI losers”? PUB shares are slightly up YTD and over the LTM. This is part of a broader pattern also followed by other Agencies with the notable exception of WPP. While this is nothing to write home about on an absolute basis, this has been strikingly better than that of other “helpers” ensnared in AI debates such as Cap Gemini and or Accenture, routinely mentioned as distant peers for the sector, or other media models perceived at risk (professional publishers). As the AI debate is not settled yet, we assume this stabilization reflects a derating deemed sufficient to reflect AI risk to business models. We empirically observe this has occurred with P/E 2026e resetting in a HSD-10x range (think 10-low teens FCF yields)… which are the levels now seen for ACN and CAP. PUB current 11x P/E 2026e implies a premium to this range, which we believe is warranted by the expected growth differential vs peers.

WHY HAVE MOST AGENCIES OUTPERFORMED OTHER “AI LOSERS”?

PUB shares are slightly up YTD, up more than 25% from the mid-February lows, and 15% since the Liveramp acquisition was announced mid-May. Some investors have mentioned to us support for the recent Liveramp move, but while we viewed favorably the acquisition (see our 18 May 2026 - Quick Take: Publicis LiveRamp acquisition strengthens data & identity expertise for a manageable cost), we beg to differ as adding €2.5bn of net market cap on a €1.9bn investment does not make sense given the relative weight in the mix (<10% of PUB EV), a LSD earnings-accretion and a contribution to OG not recognized before early 2028. More relevant is a broader pattern, as other Agencies stocks except WPP have also trended favorably. We note:

- As a group Agencies ex WPP are broadly flat. We are aware this includes specific situations (Dentsu enjoying FX tailwinds from the Japanese yen weakness despite overall underwhelming OG, Havas possibly benefiting from Bollore purchases). WPP meanwhile remains in a company specific situation, reflecting its lagging OG and balance sheet (net debt weight magnifies EV changes).

- While being slightly up is nothing to write home about, the overall Agencies performance pattern is strikingly better than that of other "helpers" ensnared in AI debates such as Cap Gemini and or Accenture, routinely mentioned as distant peers for the sector, or other media models perceived at risk (professional publishers), which have continued to derate.

The AI debate is not settled yet, so we assume this share price stabilization reflects a derating deemed sufficient to reflect AI risk to business models. We empirically observe this has occurred with P/E 2026e resetting in a HSD-10x range, which are incidentally the levels now seen for ACN and CAP. PUB current 11x P/E 2026e implies a premium to this range, which we believe is warranted by the expected growth differential vs peers.

Source: company, Bernstein analysis

2Q organic growth of 4.8% was slightly ahead of consensus 4.7% / Bern 4.7% and prior indications of a "4 to 5%" range, with a "slight" sequential acceleration. For perspective PUB had beaten quarterly OG expectations by 60bp on average over the last eight quarters (range 0.1%-1.3%). This is a healthy performance off sequentially stronger comps as 2Q OG included :

- A Sapient drag, as the unit was negatively impacted by delayed projects (echoing comments made by other consulting firms), leading to a mid-single digit decline. Given Sapient share of total revs (14% last year, now down to 13%), this implies a negative -70bp contribution to OG, and OG ex Sapient at a healthy >6% level.

- The carryover impact of the Middle East war. The Middle East & Africa area generates a low share of revenues (3%), but the disruption was already very significant in March and continued in 2Q with a -8% decline, suggesting -30bp headwinds at consolidated level. Both North America and Europe OG remained broadly stable at a mid-single digit level:

- Continued gap with peers. PUB is the first agency to report before Havas (23 July), Omnicom (28 July), and WPP on 6 August. - 1H EBITA was up 2% to €1268m, slightly ahead of expectations, with the company's best-ever 1H margin level, consistent with the full year objective of a slight improvement. Note:
  - Sharply lower personnel costs share of revs, with a mention of "scalability" on last year recruitments (read headcount rising less than revs on an organic basis). Disclosure reduced since 1H25 no longer allows monitoring incentives, estimated by adjusting total staff costs for fixed salaries, restructuring costs and freelancers, but we assume pay-outs levels were unchanged at a historically high level. Severance costs (euphemistically called "investments in talent bench upgrade") charged above the line within staff costs were meanwhile higher yoy. We asked during the earnings call that FX headwinds might have helped in 1H due to the Indian Rupee sharp depreciation in 1H (a factor mentioned by some IT services companies), but that was not confirmed by management (the share of the staff cost pool is much lower at PUB, well below 10%, but the company does not hedge to our knowledge, unlike IT services companies). Management indicated it was expecting lower personnel costs as a % of revs over FY26.
  - The gains on personnel costs were partly offset by rising "other" Opex, including AI costs (management indicated it was closely monitoring licenses consumptions and costs).
  - The disclosure of margins by regions indicated a €20m EBITA shortfall from Middle East and Africa, based on a -10% margin (vs 1% in 1H25).
  - The €1268m Headline EBITA excludes €7m of costs related to Liveramp acquisition, with more to come in 2H (c.€25m). These costs are logically excluded from Headline net income and Headline EPS

- Operating cash conversion before WCR changes was a healthy 99% at an operating pre-tax level. The 1H26 WCR outflow exceeded -€2bn, due according to management to the reversal of the favorable cut offs at end 2025. As a reminder

Agencies' WCR outflows/inflows are largely driven by media-buying activities, leading to massive 1H outflows that are then reversed at year-end, with the company aiming for a neutral balance at end year.

- These WCR swings explain why average net debt levels are structurally higher than the year-end levels and therefore more relevant for credit metrics and valuation purposes. Note this gap will be distorted by the timing of the Liveramp acquisition, announced on 17 May, but expected to close only in late 4Q after regulatory approvals. This incidentally explains why the company has adjusted its 2026 average net debt level outlook from €1.1bn to €0.9bn, due to the late closing of Liveramp, and the simultaneous pause of other acquisitions for the remainder of the year (note our model excludes Liveramp pending the closing acquisition - see impact in the next section).

EXHIBIT 21: Net cash at year end vs the more relevant Average debt level: Mind the gap

- Other items were finally slightly below our expectations, with associates contribution turning negative (VivaTech has been sold), and a higher effective tax rate of 25.9%. This led to Headline EPS of €3.52, slightly up on a reported basis, and 5.7% on constant FX basis.

- We include the carryover impact of 2025 acquisitions (slightly below €100m), but still exclude at this stage 1/ the impact of the yet to be closed Liveramp acquisition, which should be slightly accretive at EPS level (Bern 1-2% on a full year basis) ; 2/ further potential acquisitions, expected to add 200bp to reported growth in the LT framework outlined by the company (management has stressed a focus on deleveraging to digest Liveramp, suggesting a pause for 2027, and the eventual resumption of M&A as of 2028).

- Updated FX assumptions (€/$ at 1.16 vs 1.18 previously), and EM currencies impact unchanged (this is potentially conservative if prevailing rates stay unchanged, notably for the Brazilian Real and the Chinese Yuan).
- 20bp margin improvement for both FY26 and FY27. We calculate a net 20bp improvement implies a c.20% drop through.
- The drop-off from financial charges of the €20m one off FX loss charged to 2025 "adjusted" EPS, offset by higher net cost of debt (PUB impacted by lower income on its $ gross cash position). Note Publicis occasionally includes in its "headline" financial charges some one off costs (this was the case in 1H with -€62m of net financial charges including -€10m of FX loss and -€5m of "other" charges).
- A higher tax rate of 25.9%, vs 25.5% previously.
