Strong AI demand but memory backdrop impacts NT margins and H2 demand

Strong AI demand and a pull-forward in PC, server/storage as customers front-load purchases given the share increase in memory costs supports solid April results generally across the board. However, increased risk of demand destruction owing to OEMs sharply increasing prices to manage gross margin could lead to disappointing second half of the year outlooks. Specifically, we see increased risk that HP Inc formally trims the FY26 EPS guide following a soft reiteration last quarter, albeit with commentary suggesting the low-end was prudent. Furthermore, we expect NetApp's initial FY27 EPS guidance range to fall below the VA Cons of $8.59 reflecting flattish product gross margin. Finally, we see risk to Everpure's FY27 gross margin outlook that suggests F1Q is the trough and should increase sequentially through the year. Therefore, given steep increases in memory and other component pricing, we see risk to the operating margin outlook.

- HP Inc: We expect in-line PC rev driven by customers ordering ahead of higher memory costs as well as strategic actions (pricing, LTAs, product reconfigurations) taken by the company. Furthermore, Print margin of >18%, towards the high-end of the long-term guide (16%-19%), should mitigate the impact of memory costs. However, PCs face the risk of demand destruction from sharply higher ASPs. Therefore, we expect in-line rev of $13.6B and $0.70 EPS respectively (VA Cons $0.71) with the FY26 EPS guidance range lowered below $2.90 at the mid-point.

- Everpure: For the April quarter, our checks and analysis suggests modest revenue upside relative to our $1,009M estimate (Guide $990M to $1,010M / VA Cons $1,003M) including at least a ~$40M revenue pull-forward or about 5 points of YoY growth. Owing to higher memory costs, we expect 'Product' gross margin of 65.5%. While the quarter should be slightly better, we see margin risk in H2 as the steep rise in memory costs could lead to the company revising its FY27 gross margin expectations lower as noted earlier.

- Dell Tech: Stronger AI server revenue and slightly better PC revenue should drive revenue and EPS above our $35.6B and $2.90 estimate respectively and above the company guide. While AI-optimized server revenue recognition should be a key upside driver, we note lower AI operating margin limits the EPS upside in our view. Therefore, stronger AI server revenue and modest upside in CSG revenue should lift F1Q EPS to ~$3.05, ~5% above our $2.90 EPS estimate (Guide $2.90 +/- 10 cents, VA Cons $2.94). That said, based on investor expectations, we believe the market is already pricing in a solid EPS beat for F1Q. As such, demand commentary for core CSG and ISG ex-AI demand in the second half of the year is more critical for the shares in our view given already bullish AI-server expectations.

- NetApp: Storage industry checks suggest demand has held up relatively well despite the headwinds from higher memory/component costs. Therefore, we expect in-line revenue or $1.9B or ~10% YoY growth, towards the high-end of the company guide $1.795B to $1.945B. Given we expect in-line gross margin of 70%, F4Q EPS should be in-line to maybe a penny or two above our $2.26 estimate (Guide $2.21-$2.31 / VA Cons $2.27) potentially driven by better cost discipline. Finally, we expect the initial FY27 EPS guide in a range of $8.25 to $8.55, vs our $8.25 and the VA Cons of $8.59 to reflect solid growth and GM mix from 'Public Cloud' balanced by flattish 'Product' gross margin given higher memory/component costs.

HPQ INC (HPQ) - NEUTRAL AND $20 PRICE TARGET

Expect F2Q results in-line with our forecasts but the FY26 guide is the key focus.

We expect in-line PC revenues attributed to customers ordering ahead of higher memory costs as well as strategic actions (pricing, LTAs, product reconfigurations) taken by the company. However, we expect demand and margins to be under pressure towards the back half of FY26 into FY27 as the Windows 11 upgrade cycle nears completion and higher memory costs weigh. Solid Printing margins towards the high-end of the long-term guide (16%-19%) should act as a partial offset, but we expect PCs to be the focus given its revenue mix and exposure to memory.

F2Q results should be in-line but likely the calm before the storm

The combination of continued tailwinds from the Windows 11 refresh cycle and memory-related pull-in should lead to in-line revenue with our $9.5B estimate (Consensus $9.8B), supported by industry checks and results at CDW (link). Specifically, we expect:

- Revenue: Expect the Apr-26 quarter revenue to be relatively in-line with our $13.6B estimate (Consensus $14.0B) driven by continued tailwinds from the Windows 11 refresh cycle—which HP recently noted was 60% complete—and memory-related pull-in for PCs. While PC growth at CDW appeared muted in its most recent quarter, the company noted that it was partially due to product not being delivered.
  - PSG revenue: We forecast in-line revenue of $9.5B owing to the benefits mentioned previously, but below Consensus of $9.8B given potential demand destruction.
  - Print revenue: We forecast in-line revenue of $4.1B as ~2% growth in Hardware is offset by a ~3% decline in Supplies.
- Operating margin: Expect operating margin of 6.5% (Consensus 6.5%) as PC margins below the long-term guide of 5%-7% weigh despite solid Print margin of 18.7%.
- Non-GAAP EPS: As a result of in-line results on the top-line and margin, we forecast EPS of $0.70 (Consensus $0.71).

The F3Q guide should still see PC benefits but memory likely a larger headwind

Increase our F3Q PSG revenue forecast owing to better unit demand.

We increase our July-26 quarter PSG revenue estimates to $9.3B from $8.7B due to slightly better pricing and notebook unit growth. We leave our Printing revenue estimates unchanged, leading to total revenue of $13.2B or a ~5% decline YoY. Therefore, we expect HPQ to guide EPS to a range of $0.60-$0.70, bracketing our $0.65 and Consensus $0.62.

Slight tweaks to our FY26 and FY27 estimates. Expect the FY26 guide to be reiterated

Due to better PSG estimates, we tweak our FY26 and FY27 revenue estimates higher by ~2%. We expect PSG margins to trough in the second-half of FY26, with incremental improvements through FY27. As a result, our FY26 EPS estimate increases by a penny to $2.88, and our FY27 EPS estimate increases ~1% to $2.92.

For the FY26 guide, we expect the company to reiterate the $2.90-$3.20 guide with a bias to the low end. That said, based on investor conversations, we believe EPS expectations are closer to a $2.70-$2.80 range given the impact of higher memory costs and risk of incremental demand destruction in F3Q and F4Q.

Our $20 price target is ~7x our CY27 EPS est of $2.92

Relative to the S&P 500, HP is trading at a ~66% discount, near the widest spread in over10 years as significant increases in memory prices is expected to sharply erode HP's 'Personal Systems Group' (PSG) segment margin and pressure demand in the second half of CY26. Given we do not expect trends to improve over the next 6-9 months, HP's valuation metrics are likely to remain at a steep discount.

EVERPURE (P) - SELL AND A $63 PRICE TARGET

Recent VAR checks indicate stable to solid near-term storage demand but we are increasingly concerned that rising memory prices are driving a demand pull-forward.

Industry checks for core storage suggest demand has held up relatively well despite the headwinds from higher memory/component costs. Specifically, in our most recent UBS Evidence Lab VAR survey:

- Roughly 48% of respondents noted storage demand was 'strong' with another 44% citing 'very strong' demand, up from 41% and 36% respectively in the prior survey.
- For all-flash arrays, roughly 39% of respondents noted 'strong' demand with another 43% noting 'very strong' demand, up from 40% and 28% respectively in the prior survey.
- However, strength ticked down for Everpure relative to the prior survey with just 66% of respondents noting 'strong' or 'very strong' demand, down from 76% in the prior survey.

While it is difficult to gauge the impact of sharply rising prices for DRAM memory, Flash storage chips, and other components, on customer behavior, given vendors have tightened pricing quotes from 60-90 days to in some cases 30 days or less, we suspect a bit of a pull-in is driving some of the demand across the industry and at Everpure. For example, we estimate the large reseller CDW saw about $100M in estimated revenue pull-in during the March quarter across PC, server, and storage. Moreover, Everpure suggested that orders booked late in FY26 and a "pull-in" in F1Q would account for 8 points of revenue growth or ~$80M.

DDR DRAM and NAND flash ASPs continue to increase

Expect DRAM pricing +60% QoQ in Q2 and NAND pricing +40% QoQ.

Based on recent industry checks, UBS expects DDR contract pricing to increase close to +60% QoQ / +379% YoY in calendar Q2. As for NAND flash, UBS now expects blended contract pricing +60% QoQ / +278% YoY in calendar Q2. For Q3:26, we expect NAND pricing to increase another +10% QoQ or +296% YoY.

Source: UBS estimates as of May 2026

'Pull-forward' and steady industry demand should drive a modest rev beat

For the April quarter, our checks and analysis suggests modest upside to revenue to our $1,009M estimate (Guide $990M to $1,010M / VA Cons $1,003M) including at least a ~$40M revenue pull-forward or about 5 points of YoY growth.

- By category, we expect 'Product' revenue of $549M, down 11% QoQ (VA Cons $530M), better than seasonal owing to the impact of the pull-forward contribution. Backing out the impact of the pull-forward, we estimate 'Product' revenue down 18% QoQ, slighty better than seasonal the past couple of years.
- For 'Subscription services', we expect revenue of $460M or ~13% YoY growth, a slight decel from the ~14% in F4Q (VA Cons $473M / ~16%).

'Product' GM should be impacted by rising memory ASPs in F1Q and all of FY27

For fiscal 1Q, the company guided 'Product' gross margin excluding hyperscalers to be at the lower end of the typical range of 65% to 70% reflecting the sharp increase in memory/component costs. We note the company implied guide and our 65% forecast for F1Q reflects price increases across product announced in early February that will not impact results until F2Q along with quoting periods reduced to 30 days from 60 days. However, since the initial average price increase of around 20% in early February, we estimate Everpure has cumulatively raised prices through the end of April on average by around 70% since the beginning of the year as memory prices continue to increase.

Expect 'Product' gross margin of 65% in F1Q with pressure the rest of FY27 increasing the risk of an adjustment lower for the year.

Also at that time, the company noted it expected F1Q to be the product gross margin trough with sequential improvement over the the next several quarters as pricing adjustments take hold. However, we believe there is some confusion around the drivers of product gross margin going forward.

- First, the company outlook that product gross margin is expected to improve sequentially applies to the stand-alone portfolio and does not include the mix benefit from a heavier weight of hyperscaler revenue with 75%-85% gross margin in the second half of the year.
- Second, for product gross margin to increase back towards the high-end of the 65%-70% range, price stability is key. Given input costs have risen faster Everpure average pricing with some components up 300%-900%, we see gross margin risk for F2Q and FY27.

Therefore, for F2Q, we expect 'Product' gross margin of 65.5%, flattish with F1Q with a F4Q exit product gross margin of 67.5%, below the VA Cons of 66.3% for F2Q and 68.9% in F4Q.

Revenue outlook should benefit from memory "pass-through" but mechanical

For F2Q and the full-year, the revenue outlook should see a healthy benefit from the price increases as the company passes through the higher costs.

Expect the FY27 revenue guide to be raised but driven by higher memory cost pass-throughs, not stronger demand.

- For the F2Q revenue guide, we expect upside to our $1,039M estimate (VA Cons $1,044M) as storage checks have been stable while we expect incremental customer pull-forward of $20M or ~2 pts of growth given steep increases in memory prices. Therefore, we expect the company to guide revenue to be in a range of $1,050M to $1,070M or 23% YoY growth at the mid-point vs our ~21% estimate.
- For FY27, given even higher price increases noted earlier than previously expected, we expect incremental revenue upside relative to the current guide of $4.3B to $4.4B and our $4.4B estimate (VA cons $4.4B) to capture the pass-through. While we estimate average pricing is up ~70%, the lag effect of price, discounting from list, and likely demand destruction should mute the impact on revenue. Nevertheless, the company should increase the revenue guide range by ~$100M or about ~3%. However, we note the increase is purely mechanical from higher prices and should not have an impact on gross profit dollars in FY27.

Expect F2Q operating income to bracket our est

Given we expect the higher revenue to come in at zero gross margin, we don't expect the company to change the operating income guidance range for FY27 of $780M to $820M vs our $798M estimate and the VA Cons of $802M. At the mid-point of the guide, based on our expectations of a slight increase to the revenue outlook because of a pass-through, we expect the FY27 guide to imply operating margin of ~18.0%, a touch below our estimate.

For F2Q, we expect the company to guide operating income to a range of $165M to $175M or growth of 27% to 35% vs our $166M estimate and the VA Cons of $169M reflecting upside from a slightly larger revenue pull-forward.

Figure 8: Expect FY27 revenue range to be bumped due to pass-through but no change to the operating income guide

Hyperscaler accelerated growth in H2 but masks moderating core demand

In fiscal 2026, Pure began shipping a solution to a hyperscaler (Meta) including Purity software and integrated DirectFlash technology to help manage NAND the hyperscaler procures. Based on a exabytes shipped, we estimate the company recognized a "few tens of millions" or around $50M in our view. For FY27, the company has noted they expect a more material contribution from the same hyperscaler, weighted to the second half of the fiscal year. Based on ~10 exabytes shipped, we expect ~$100M in incremental revenue growth in the H2:27 vs H26 contributing about 5 points of revenue growth. Stripping out the contribution from hyperscaler exabytes, we estimate 'Product' growth should slow to 10-15% in H2:27 from ~35% in H1 in part due to more difficult compares.

Core storage demand should materially decelerate in the second half of FY27 owing to higher memory costs and sharply higher prices leading to demand destruction.

Valuation is extended in our view.

Everpure shares are trading at ~36x consensus NTM EPS estimates and ~6x EV/ consensus NTM revenue, both roughly one standard deviation above the trailing 3-year average. In addition, Everpure is trading materially above other storage centric peers like NetApp, Dell, and HPE as the market appears to be valuing the company as an AI centric infrastructure company. While the company provides a license solution to help manage the storage needs of one hyperscaler, the company's end-market exposure is more enterprise centric. Our target multiple of ~27x is below the trailing 3-year mean as lower margins in the updated model and higher memory costs should lead to a pressure on valuation multiples.

DELL TECH (DELL) - NEUTRAL AND A $243 PRICE TARGET

Resilient PC demand as evidenced by comments from distributors and VARs (TD SYNNEX / CDW) and ODM checks support slight upside to our CSG revenue forecast while elevated AI backlog exiting FY26 should lift AI revenue above our $13B estimate. Furthermore, while checks indicate hyperscalers are aggressively upgrading CPU based server infrastructure, we are not expecting the same dynamic across Dell's enterprise centric customer base. Therefore, we don't expect upside at core ISG excluding AI-server. From a stock perspective, as we recently noted (link), our analysis suggests Dell shares are already pricing in a beat for the quarter and a positive revenue revision driven by AI server. Specifically, Dell's NTM P/E multiple has almost doubled to ~19x from ~10x in early February. While we expect the FY27 EPS guide to be bumped, investors, in our view, have already priced in the revisions for this fiscal year.

Expect ~3% revenue upside and 5% EPS upside in April but priced in the stock in our view

Stronger AI server revenue and slightly better PC revenue could drive revenue and EPS above our $35.6B and $2.90 estimates respectively and above the company guide. While AI-optimized server revenue recognition should be a key driver, we note lower operating margin limits the EPS upside in our view. For the April-26 quarter, we expect:

- Revenue: We expect upside to our revenue to $36.4B, ~3% above our $35.3B est (VA Cons $35.7B / Guide of $34.7 - $35.7B) driven by better a slight PC pull forward and ISG, specifically AI servers.
  - ISG revenue: Driven by stronger AI server revenue recognition, we expect ISG revenue of ~$22.0B (113% YoY vs the VA Cons of $22.5B. The company guided ISG revenue to grow over 100% driven by AI server revenue of $13B. Stripping out $13B in AI server revenue from our $22B estimate in our April-26 est and backing out $1.8B in the April-25 quarter, our non-AI ISG revenue forecast embeds ~6% YoY growth driven by 7% CPU based server growth and 4% storage growth.
    - AI server revenue: Our $13B AI server revenue estimate should be conservative given Dell's strong backlog ($43B) and elevated pipeline should drive higher revenue conversion than $13B. However, we believe the market is already pricing in several billion dollars of upside in the quarter based on investor conversations.
  - CSG revenue: Decent demand for PCs as evidenced by recent commentary from VARs like CDW and distributors like TD SYNNEX support revenue above our $12.8B estimate or ~2.0% YoY growth (Guide +2% / VA Cons +2.5%). Furthermore, our industry checks point to mid single-digit unit growth in the March quarter increasing our confidence that CGS revenue should be better. However, we don't expect upside to our CSG margin forecast of 5.1% owing to higher memory costs limiting the benefit of better revenue.
- Gross margin: We forecast gross margin of 17.1%, down 340 bps QoQ driven by mix to more AI server revenue (~37% of total vs ~29% in F4Q) vs the 17.3% VA Cons. If AI server revenue beats our forecast as we expect, combined with higher memory costs, we don't expect gross margin upside in the quarter.
- Operating margin: Higher revenues should be largely offset by mix to AI servers and PCs in our view. However, we expect stringent cost controls (Guide "down low single digits") to result in operating margins largely in-line with our 7.7% estimate (VA Cons 7.7%).
- Diluted EPS: Stronger AI server revenue and modest upside in CSG revenue should lift F1Q EPS to ~$3.05, ~5% above our $2.90 EPS estimate (Guide $2.90 +/- 10 cents, VA Cons $2.94). That said, based on investor expectations, we think the market is pricing in a solid EPS beat for F1Q.

AI server revenue should come in above the $13B guide given the $43B backlog entering the quarter.

Our industry checks point to CSG revenue upside to our 2% growth forecast but margin upside is unlikely given rising memory costs.

July outlook could be tricky. Higher memory + conservative mgmt

Our July forecast for revenue, operating margin, and EPS is below the street primarily as a result of a more conservative timing around AI server revenue recognition and the impact of higher memory. Specifically, we forecast AI server up 43% YoY to $11.7B, below the VA Cons of $12.3B or about 5 cents of EPS. Additionally, we forecast ISG margin ex-AI ~10.8%, effectively flattish YoY reflecting the impact higher memory (DRAM/NAND) costs on core server/storage profitability. Therefore, we see risk of the Dell conservatism and higher memory costs creates a tricky July guide despite AI server momentum.

July EPS guidance range falling below the VA Cons at the mid-point but above our $2.55 estimate or $2.80 +/- 10 cents.

AI server revenue strength should lift the FY26 guide but expected

We forecast AI server revenue of $13.0B, $11.7B, and $50.0B for F1Q, F2Q, and FY27 respectively. However given backlog of $43B exiting FY26, we expect upside across all periods in FY27. While AI-server revenue should drive positive revenue revisions, mid-single digit operating margins limit the EPS upside. For example, $10B incremental AI-server revenue or 20% above our forecast would be ~7% upside to the consolidated revenue guide in FY27 but around 5-6% EPS upside.

Our $243 PT is ~17x our CY27 EPS est reflecting an elevated multiple for AI server profits

Dell shares are trading at ~19x, near all-time highs driven by investor expectations of stronger AI related revenue. However, over 60% of Dell's revenue and ~70% of operating profit is driven by core PCs, storage and CPU based server. Therefore, if the market values the CSG business and core server/storage at 12.5x, in-line with the trailing 3-year average, at ~19x, the market is valuing the AI-optimized server business at ~35x. Our target multiple to ~17x effectively values core CSG, server/storage at ~15x, one standard deviation above the trailing 3-year average owing to improvements in CSG performance, stable to improving demand, and resilient CPU based server strength. For AI-optimized server, our implied target is ~30x, elevated but warranted given the strong pipeline and backlog. That said, AI-optimized server operating margins are around "mid-single digits' given low double digit gross margins, capping the multiple in our view. For context, networking and optical exposed companies with gross margins in a range of 40% to 75% trade ~20x to 45x CY27 EPS estimates.

NETAPP (NTAP) - NEUTRAL AND A $113 PRICE TARGET

Recent VAR checks indicate stable to solid near-term storage demand but we are increasingly concerned that rising memory prices are driving a demand pull-forward.

Industry checks for core storage suggest demand has held up relatively well despite the headwinds from higher memory/component costs. Specifically, in our most recent UBS Evidence Lab VAR survey, respondents note that demand for NetApp was the following:

- Roughly 31% of respondents noted storage demand was 'strong' with another 44% citing 'very strong' demand, up from 26% and 40% respectively in the prior survey.
- For all-flash arrays, roughly 21% of respondents noted 'strong' demand with another 33% noting 'very strong' demand for NetApp solutions, similar to the prior at 23% and 29% respectively suggesting all-flash ARR should be solid but note the YoY comp is 400% more difficult (10% Jan-25 / 14% April 25).
- Finally, 100% of respondents noted their NetApp sales plan was "on" or "above" plan over the prior 3-months

Therefore, we expect NetApp to report April quarter results in-line with our estimates

- Given our checks, we expect in-line revenue or $1.9B or ~10% YoY growth or towards the high-end of the company guide $1.795B to $1.945B. On the margin, rising memory costs and the risk of lingering headwinds in US government are small risks in the quarter but we believe were manageable.
- For gross margin, our 70.0% forecast is at the mid-point of the 69.5%-70.5% guide. While the market is focused on higher memory costs, for F4Q, revenue mix is also a key driver. We expect 'Public Cloud' gross margin of 85% is a tail-wind, 'Hybrid Cloud' gross margin is expected to come in at 68.5%, down 110 bps QoQ Within 'hybrid', 'Product' revenue (hybrid HDDs and all-flash) that carries a mid 50s% to high 50s% gross margin should be up ~19% QoQ weighing on consolidated gross margin in F4Q.
- Strong cost discipline, a hallmark of NetApp's recent execution, underpins our 31.2% operating margin forecast, towards the high-end of the company guide of 30.5% to 31.5%.
- Therefore, we expect F4Q EPS in-line to maybe a penny or two above our $2.26 estimate (Guide $2.21-$2.31 / VA Cons $2.27) potentially driven by better cost discipline.

Figure 17: Our FY27 estimates are slightly below the VA Cons owing to slightly slower growth and gross margin expectations

Memory a headwind in FY27 but manageable given a diverse revenue stream...

NetApp is expected to provide an initial FY27 guide in conjunction with F4Q earnings. Heading into the announcement, based on investor conversations, while the revenue guide is a key metric, the focus is on the gross margin commentary given the steep rise in memory ASPs. As noted earlier, both NAND / DRAM ASPs are expected to be up 278% / 379% in CQ2:26, 296% / 392% in CQ3:26 and 239% / 275% in CQ4:26, and 328% / 427% in CQ1:27.

Figure 19: DRAM pricing is expected to sharply increase YoY the rest of CY26 into early CY27

...as 'Support' and 'Public Cloud' revenue should almost hit ~50% of rev in FY27

Although higher memory costs are a gross margin headwind in FY27, the most impacted revenue segment. 'Product' will be less than 50% of revenue in FY27 while we expect 'Support' and 'Public Cloud' revenue that should generate at least 90+% and ~85% gross margin respectively. Collectively, 'Support' and 'Public Cloud' should account for almost 50% of our FY27 revenue forecast or ~$3.5B Therefore, while higher memory costs should pressure 'Product' gross margin in FY27 relative to FY26, 'Support' and 'Public Cloud' revenue provide margin support. As such, we expect consolidated gross margin to be guided in a range of 70% to 71%, down modestly YoY.

Expectations of mid-single digit revenue growth and slightly lower gross margin YoY suggest a guidance range of $8.25 to $8.55 or $8.35 at the mid-point or ~1% above our estimate and ~3% below the VA Cons

NetApp's valuation is balanced reflecting supply chain concerns

NetApp is trading at 14x NTM consensus EPS estimates, in-line with the trailing 3-year average. However, relative to the S&P 500, the shares are trading at a 37% discount, slighty wider owing to lingering concerns around demand for storage in key markets like government and the gross margin risk arising from higher memory costs. Finally, we believe investors are focused on the potential puts and takes of the upcoming FY27 revenue, gross margin, and EPS guide. Reflecting the uncertainty our $113 price target is ~13x our CY27 EPS est of $8.57, slightly below the trailing 3-year average.

VOLATILITY EXPECTED TO BE ELEVATED AT NETAPP AND HP INC POST EARNINGS RELATIVE TO PRIOR EVENTS

Historically, share price reaction of 'off-cycle' earnings have been somewhat volatile. Of the four companies that report during the week post Memorial Day, Everpure has been the most volatile. Everpure shares moving an average of ~16% over the past 8 quarters with at least a 10% move in 6 of the last 8 quarters. Based on investor positioning and debates around the hyperscaler opportunity and gross margin outlook, we expect a fairly volatile outcome, potentially more than the implied move in the options market. Moreover, the market is pricing a ~7.4% move for NetApp post earnings, ~260 bps above the trailing 8-quarter average as the company is expected to provide an initial FY27 guide during a period of elevated memory costs. Given the gross margin dynamics and cautious investor sentiment, we expect the share price reaction to be muted. Finally, we expect a larger T+1 move than the ~10% expected for Dell given the elevated valuation and crowded positioning post last quarter.

The options market is pricing in a ~15% move for Everpure T+1 given gross margin risk and optionality around hyperscaler engagements.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Investing in the Technology sector entails above average risk. The rapid pace of innovation, increasing competition, and exposure to macroeconomic cycles are among the many risks faced by investors in technology stocks. Moreover, it is extremely difficult to project the financial results of technology companies since sales visibility is limited. Finally, valuing technology stocks using P/E multiples can prove challenging as neither traditional nor non-traditional valuation measures have provided much insight into how these stocks trade.

Dell Tech

Dell's business is dependent on global macroeconomic trends and earnings could see significant downside if the global macro weakens. Operating execution could be a risk as Dell needs to gain share to be able to grow, particularly in the non AI ISG and CSG segments. We use P/E to value Dell.

HP Inc

Key risks to our investment thesis include (1) a slump in IT spending linked to weakened GDP growth, (2) weakness in the PC market, and (3) weaker-than expected printer profits due to either lower demand or margin pressure from competition. We use P/E to value HP Inc.

NetApp

Key risks to our NetApp thesis include (1) The pace of IT spending accelerates as concerns around global economic volatility/slowdown abates, (2) competitors like DellEMC, Everpure, and HP Enterprise struggle to adopt to the growth in public cloud driven Storage demand, (3) the adoption of new public cloud oriented products accelerates, (4) a buyout by a larger system vendor, and (5) revenue acceleration could lead to the company beating expectations. Our valuation methodology for NetApp uses P/E.

Everpure

Key risks to our Everpure thesis include (1) The pace of IT spending accelerates as concerns around global economic volatility/slowdown abates, (2) the adoption of new public cloud oriented products accelerates, (3) a buyout by a larger system vendor, and (4) revenue acceleration could lead to the company beating expectations. Our valuation methodology for Pure Storage uses P/E.

This document is a general communication and is educational in nature; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor’s individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investments involve risks, and investors should exercise prudence and their own judgment in making their investment decisions. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. You may read the document at https://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions.

Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
