Guess Who's Back, Back Again - In 2Q

We have a favorable view towards the online travel space heading into 2Q earnings as expectations are low, Middle East tensions are in cooling-off mode, and we are already seeing signs of travel demand picking up. At mid-teens P/E with improving fundamentals, we would add to positions here.

The Key Takeaway: The backdrop for OTA stocks is favorable right now based on: 1) travel demand picking up into the summer season, 2) consensus estimates that appear low given that management teams guided when Middle East tensions (and jet fuel prices) were much higher, and 3) attractive valuations at mid-teens P/E. Industry data we track (see our Quarterly Travel Tracker below) implies demand was healthy despite some impairment early in the quarter. Elevated airfare is coming down, capacity is improving, and U.S. domestic travel looks particularly solid as evidenced by TSA/CBP passenger volume. Persistent revPAR strength is another indication of a healthy domestic demand backdrop (link). Notably, even midscale/ economy revPAR is positive in 2Q after being under pressure much of last year, while the high-end continues to accelerate. With this domestic strength and the World Cup, we think stocks with the highest relative exposure to U.S. domestic trends (ABNB/EXPE) are well positioned near-term. AI disintermediation concerns have largely fallen by the wayside in conversations as geopolitical concerns have taken center stage, but we don't think the OTAs are completely out of the woods on this front as agentic AI experiences continue to evolve in consumer internet. BKNG remains our preferred name in the group, but we'd note ABNB (improved product velocity) and EXPE (high domestic footprint) also look solid here.

Below we detail our expectations for the upcoming 2Q prints.

BKNG

For 2Q, we are modeling 318m room nights (3% growth), right at the midpoint of the guided range, which could prove a tad conservative, and we are in-line with the Street on bookings growth at 6% Y/Y (+4% ex-fx). While small, BKNG has the greatest direct and indirect exposure to geopolitical impacts relative to peers given its large EU and international footprint, and lower relative exposure to the stronger domestic trends. For 3Q guide, we expect 5-7% room nights growth, 6-8% bookings and revenue growth, as well as 8-12% EBITDA growth. We'd expect BKNG to reiterate its FY guidance, which baked in a 2H recovery of demand. The valuation gap between BKNG and EXPE is far more narrow than in recent history (BKNG: 16x our FY27E GAAP EPS, EXPE: 14x our FY27E GAAP EPS), hence we like the risk-reward here.

ABNB

We sense a subtle but important improvement in the pace of execution at ABNB following some of the changes to the C-suite earlier this year. Product velocity is a key growth driver for a company like ABNB, and that seems to be picking up in '26. 2Q should benefit from improving domestic trends on World Cup, geopolitical tensions abating, early traction in boutique hotel, and RNPL. For 2Q, we are modeling ~146m net nights and experiences booked, +8% Y/Y, broadly in line with consensus, which could prove conservative, and we see ~$27b in GBV (+13% Y/Y). EBITDA could surprise to the upside again given the 1Q beat and 2Q guidance, and we are modeling $1.24b for 2Q. For ABNB's 3Q outlook, we expect high-single-digit room night growth, high-single-digit GBV growth, revenue in the $4.5-$4.6b range, and EBITDA margin to expand year-over-year. We would also expect ABNB to reiterate its FY targets.

EXPE

Expedia has the highest relative exposure to the US in its core OTA franchise, so we like the set up heading into 2Q based on the improving domestic travel trends since the last print. B2B has been the bright spot for growth in recent quarters, and 2Q should be no exception. For EXPE, we see 2Q bookings of $33b and $4.17b in revenue, slightly ahead of the midpoint of guide ranges. We are slightly ahead on room night growth (+6% vs. Street 5%). We are modeling $1b in EBITDA (24.9% margin), more or less in line with consensus which could prove conservative. The positive ADR environment helps drive better unit economics at EXPE offering some wiggle room around profitability. For 3Q we think the company may signal another quarter of stable to improving trends, and we are modeling 4% bookings growth ex-FX, 5% revenue growth ex-FX, and slight EBITDA margin expansion. We'd expect the FY guidance to be reiterated across the board given the tougher 2H comps, but with the improvement in domestic travel, this may prove conservative.

TRIP

TRIP shares remain in event-driven mode following the sale of TheFork. After-tax proceeds from the above-consensus $700m sale could be redeployed towards higher buyback activity. The company has stated that all options remain on the table, including possible sale of other assets. Viator has been the crown jewel at TRIP for some time. Given the space's increasing focus on experiences, we wouldn't be surprised if something were to happen here. At the same time, the core Tripadvisor franchise continues to face significant headwinds related to its high SEO exposure and Google cutting off traffic broadly across the web in favor of AI overviews (Figure 11 below). Most publishers with Google dependency are down to around 25% of inbound traffic from SEO in '26, and we'd expect TRIP is in a comparable spot for its core franchise. Hence, as this figure is further reduced, the revenue growth headwinds should start to abate. For 2Q we estimate $498m in revenue, more or less in line with consensus. The bright spot once again should be Experiences, where we are estimating 7% bookings growth and 4% revenue growth. 2Q EBITDA margins likely remain under pressure given the SEO headwinds in the core hotel and investments in experiences. For 3Q guidance, the company likely moves TheFork to discontinued operations, and hence the focus is on the remainco.

Valuation Methodology and Risks

U.S. Internet

Airbnb Inc. (ABNB / ABNB)

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $125 is based on a 20x P/E multiple on our FY27 estimate.
Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Key risks to the upside include: 1) ABNB may re-accelerate growth or drive improved monetization through adjacencies such as hotels; 2) a strong brand and higher direct traffic mix, which enables lower dependency on paid marketing; 3) ABNB's supply side moat may prove more resilient/hard for competitors to commoditize the host value prop. Key risks to the downside include: 1) Historically not being able to scale outside of the core offering, despite a number of attempts since 2016; 2) marketing intensity may increase to help scale in nine "expansion geos," potentially pressuring margins further.

Booking Holdings Inc. (BKNG / BKNG)

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $210 is based on a 18x multiple on our FY27E GAAP EPS estimates.
Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Risks include: (1) Google expanding its offering and direct channels taking share from OTAs, both of which would likely depress take rates and margins; (2) greater than anticipated macro weakness.

Expedia Inc. (EXPE / EXPE)

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $264 is based on 14x our FY27E GAAP EPS.
Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Risks include (1) integration and related execution risks, (2) direct booking offerings and (3) direct channels taking share from OTAs.

Tripadvisor Inc. (TRIP / TRIP)

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $9 is based on a SOTP methodology, using 2x EBITDA for Hotels & Other, 6x EBITDA for Experiences on our FY26 estimates, and a flat $400m EV for TheFork.
Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Upside risks include: 1) Faster-than-expected improvement in monetization as well as stabilization in traffic acquisition costs could drive upside to our estimates, 2) potential sale or spin-off of assets, potentially unlocking value for investors, 3) other strategic alternatives, and 4) new revenue streams such as licensing data for AI training, which would result in upside to our current estimates. Downside risks include: 1) a pullback from OTA partners, 2) continued margin pressure from increased ad spend and investment in non-hotel categories; 3) steady traffic shift to mobile where monetization rate is lower.

Quarterly Travel Tracker

Middle East's Most Visible Impacts (Airfare/Capacity) Improving As of Late

The elevated jet fuel prices translated into higher airfares and trimmed capacity since geopolitical tensions peaked in early 2Q, however, we see early signs that these impacts are abating. While prices remain elevated relative to last year, the trend is improving in late 2Q and we view this as encouraging. As of 6/22, domestic airfare is 31% higher y/y, while international airfare is 19% higher y/y, but coming down from the peak, illustrated below. Capacity however, seems a bit more under pressure, but still improving sequentially. We saw a better recovery in international seat capacity, which returned to flat late June, while domestic seat capacity growth is still slightly negative year-on-year.

U.S. Domestic Passenger Volume Softened Mid-2Q, Then Recovered

TSA throughput data shows a clear dip in domestic traveler volume mid-quarter, likely from the elevated prices and reduced capacity. Volume growth recovered as the quarter progressed, as greater clarity emerged around Middle East turmoil and fares eased. Some of this could be attributable to softer comps as they lap tariff-related headwinds, but we think this was largely driven by the improved pricing and volume trends, as well as some World Cup contribution.

FIGURE 9. TSA Throughput Softened In May, But Recovered Shortly Thereafter

Inbound International Travel Improving As We Approach World Cup Contribution

CBP disclosures up to May show international inbound passengers (via flights) hitting a growth trough in April (-3% y/y). In May, inbounds improved sequentially to nearly flat year-over-year. Some of this is a comp dynamic, where last year we saw international travel to the US pull back in the wake of tariff chaos. However, we think this is also a demonstration of firmer geographic growth trends, as Europe-focused BKNG has seen growth accelerate in the US for the last four consecutive quarters. Once the June data is released, we think this should flip positive from the influx of travelers for the World Cup.

OTA Site Visits Improved Concurrent With The Conflict Easing

We track visits to primary websites and apps, as well as to older ancillary domains owned by respective online travel companies. Since the conflict kicked off, prospective travelers have been facing greater complexity as they evaluate whether to reroute travel plans, shift dates, and navigate higher airfare. As a result, visits to OTA domains picked up meaningfully as the year progressed. This makes sense, as one would expect customers to shop around more (and visit sites more frequently) given the variables at play. Traffic to BKNG's sites has grown ~14% on average this year, EXPE saw greater improvements in early 2026, but is still seeing HSD traffic growth, and ABNB traffic growth has been accelerating as the year has progressed. TRIP is continuing to see double-digit traffic declines on the SEO headwinds noted above.

Why EQUAL WEIGHT?

ABNB is the market leader globally in alternative accommodations, but growth has slowed. We see RNPL and hotels as potential upside drivers to consensus estimates, and EBITDA margin may have found a new floor for the next few years. Valuation screens as full on GAAP EPS vs. peers.

Upside case USD 200.00

ABNB is able to capitalize on strong brand and streamline its marketing spend while maintaining supply side moats. Company is able to successfully execute in hotels, experiences, services and in other new offerings.

Downside case USD 100.00

Travel demand deteriorates in a recession scenario and marketing ramps more quickly than contemplated to defend share. Regulatory disputes are not resolved & locations become limited.

Why OVERWEIGHT?

BKNG continues to be the gold standard of travel names, in our view, and we expect numbers to remain solid. Concerns around increasing pressure on margins are likely overblown and could yield upside to results and stock appreciation. Even given its scale, we believe BKNG will grow bookings in-line with the overall industry.

Upside case USD 240.00

Our upside case assumes a longer and stronger travel recovery from here and more margin leverage than currently forecast.

Downside case USD 120.00

Our downside case assumes worsening pressure on travel demand, likely in a recession scenario, and greater margin deleverage as marketing spend ramps to defend share.

Why EQUAL WEIGHT?

EXPE has benefitted from the post-pandemic recovery in travel, albeit to a lesser degree than other OTA peers given higher US/domestic mix. Structurally, lower marketing efficiency may prove more difficult to overcome, and valuation appears fair, in our view.

Upside case USD 370.00

EXPE may be able to re-accelerate bookings/revenue growth faster than contemplated and/or achieve greater marketing efficiency, setting a path towards "rule of 40" status.

Downside case USD 185.00

Bookings growth may slow further in a recession and/or marketing intensity may increase greater than expected as EXPE leans in on spend to win market share.

Why UNDERWEIGHT?

We expect continued revenue challenges in core TripAdvisor as that business is optimized for profitability and to support growth in Viator. Metasearch faces increasing risk from Google and emerging AI travel companion tools, which may circumvent the metasearch experience.

Upside case USD 20.00

A potential disposition or spin-off of one of the three businesses could result in value unlock.

Downside case USD 5.00

Steeper reduction in budgets by partners and higher traffic acquisition costs could drive downside to our estimates.

Overweight - The stock is expected to outperform the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Equal Weight - The stock is expected to perform in line with the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Underweight - The stock is expected to underperform the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $125 is based on a 20x P/E multiple on our FY27 estimate.

Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Key risks to the upside include: 1) ABNB may re-accelerate growth or drive improved monetization through adjacencies such as hotels; 2) a strong brand and higher direct traffic mix, which enables lower dependency on paid marketing; 3) ABNB's supply side moat may prove more resilient/hard for competitors to commoditize the host value prop. Key risks to the downside include: 1) Historically not being able to scale outside of the core offering, despite a number of attempts since 2016; 2) marketing intensity may increase to help scale in nine "expansion geos," potentially pressuring margins further.

Valuation Methodology: Our price target of $9 is based on a SOTP methodology, using 2x EBITDA for Hotels & Other, 6x EBITDA for Experiences on our FY26 estimates, and a flat $400m EV for TheFork.

Risks which May Impede the Achievement of the Barclays Research Valuation and Price Target: Upside risks include: 1) Faster-than-expected improvement in monetization as well as stabilization in traffic acquisition costs could drive upside to our estimates, 2) potential sale or spin-off of assets, potentially unlocking value for investors, 3) other strategic alternatives, and 4) new revenue streams such as licensing data for AI training, which would result in upside to our current estimates. Downside risks include: 1) a pullback from OTA partners, 2) continued margin pressure from increased ad spend and investment in non-hotel categories; 3) steady traffic shift to mobile where monetization rate is lower.

Sustainable Investing Related Research: There is currently no globally accepted framework or definition (legal, regulatory or otherwise) of, nor market consensus as to what constitutes a 'sustainable', 'ESG', 'green', 'climate-friendly' or an equivalent company, investment, strategy or consideration or what precise attributes are required to be eligible to be categorised by such terms. This means there are different ways to evaluate a company or an investment and so different values may be placed on certain sustainability credentials as well as adverse ESG-related impacts of companies and ESG controversies. The evolving nature of sustainable investing considerations, models and methodologies means it can be challenging to definitively and universally classify a company or investment under a sustainable investing label and there may be areas where such companies and investments could improve or where adverse ESG-related impacts or ESG controversies exist. The evolving nature of sustainable finance related regulations and the development of jurisdiction-specific regulatory criteria also means that there is likely to be a degree of divergence as to the interpretation of such terms in the market. We expect industry guidance, market practice, and regulations in this field to continue to evolve.
