We expect a mostly solid set of 2Q26 results from our coverage, with few fireworks after BASF pre-announced. We're only expecting further guidance raises from the US industrial gases, and even those by less than 1% on average. Our highest conviction tactical call is long Akzo Nobel, where we think consensus' forecast of a guidance cut is too bearish, and we have asterisks on the prints of Air Liquide, where we believe fundamentals are fine but comparable growth expectations a little bullish, and Solvay, where a miss could be severely punished.

Our highest conviction tactical call is long Akzo Nobel. While we are more in-line for Akzo's 2Q26's EBITDA, our various consensus sources are all telling us that Akzo will cut their FY26 EBITDA guidance of €1.47bn+ (Company €1,420m, Bloomberg €1,424m, Visible Alpha €1,423m). We believe a guidance cut at 2Q26 is highly unlikely and model 2026 EBITDA of €1.48bn. We see limited evidence of sufficient volume declines to change the Company's guidance views. And on the cost side, under our forecasts of their raw material basket (Exhibit 6), only LSD +ve pricing across 2026 is required for the neutral raw material spread assumed by guidance. Higher pricing and resilient volumes could even be a source of 3Q upside to guidance, if Akzo follow their playbook from 1Q results. While we are less certain on the medium-term outlook for Akzo, we like the stock into results.

Slightly cautious on Air Liquide because of growth expectations, but we see fundamentals as sound. Air Liquide sold off after 1Q26 because of their growth commentary (see report Air Liquide 1Q26: Who is the guidance for?), although the shares recovered as the guidance proved conservative. We are worried that something similar may happen with H1 results. Consensus is again forecasting accelerating sequential comparable growth in 2H vs. 2Q. We are slightly less bullish than consensus, mainly through Large Industries (Exhibit 2), where we do not forecast an on-site volume demand inflection outside the Americas, nor materially more ramp-ups outside of Normand'Hy. Despite our lower growth forecasts, we are in-line with FY26 profitability estimates, as in this pricing environment and with their ongoing cost initiatives, we believe Air Liquide will be able to compensate on margins (BernE 2H26 OIR margin improvement +130bps).

For Solvay's print we see risk-reward relatively negatively. We are modelling an in-line 2Q26 EBITDA result, based on sufficient acceleration at Coatis to cover for pricing lags and closures elsewhere (Exhibit 11). However, a miss is likely to lead to investor concerns about Solvay's ability to reach the bottom of their guidance range, whilst even a small beat (e.g. c. ~€185m EBITDA) still puts FY26 guidance under threat from low-demand inflationary environment (Chemicals: Specialty or Commodity, with potentially tough times in between). For Solvay, we model enough sequential underlying EBITDA improvement to reach 2026 guidance, assuming that the Sadara peroxides plant restarts by Q4, and there is no further major raw material inflation, as pricing in some businesses (e.g. silicas) is passed on with a lag. However, we are not modelling a further deterioration in either demand or soda ash pricing, which would make us more bearish.

Vara consensus for Air Liquide except 3Q comp growth (VA). Bloomberg for LIN and APD
Source: Company information, Vara, Bloomberg, Visible Alpha, Bernstein estimates and analysis

Air Liquide's consensus comparable growth expectations may be slightly elevated in 2H26, as we are slightly more bearish on Large Industries. Air Liquide sold off after 1Q26 based on conservative comparable growth guidance (see report Air Liquide 1Q26: Who is the guidance for?). We are worried that something similar may happen with H1 results. 2025's comps are similar across 2Q and 2H, so the acceleration in growth will need to come from fundamentals. We continue to forecast volume growth in Large Industries in the Americas (5% 3Q, 2.5% 4Q), but do not expect European or Asian on-site volumes to materially improve in 2H26 absent more clarity on the Strait of Hormuz crisis. We therefore do not forecast an acceleration of Large Industries growth, unlike consensus, and we also believe the hydrogen start-ups which could deliver volume growth outside Normand'Hy are not due until 2027, and even Normand'Hy itself may not generate substantial revenues in the start-up phase.

We are less concerned about FY26 profitability, however. c. 70bps lower growth over H2 means only a c. €100m / 3% reduction in 2H OIR and therefore a c. 1.6% reduction in FY OIR by our estimates (assuming +100bps margins); in this pricing environment and with their ongoing cost initiatives, we believe Air Liquide will be able to compensate; we model 2H underlying margin improvement of +130bps. We reiterate our position that we think the underlying business is performing solidly, but this is more about managing investor expectations.

Akzo consensus from the company (Visible Alpha), PPG consensus from Visible Alpha
Source: Company information, Visible Alpha, Bernstein analysis and estimates

We see no guidance cut for Akzo Nobel with 2Q, so consider consensus too bearish. The end consumer has showed some resilience in 2026 to date, meaning we see little reason for a guidance cut based on the volume trajectory. We see the greater threat as raw material inflation constraining profitability. Forecasts for our estimate of Akzo's raw material basket indicate HSD-LDD raw material inflation over 2Q-4Q 2026, which we believe can be offset by c. 2% pricing (Exhibit 5 - Exhibit 7). We see this as very realistic given Akzo's pricing power historically. Given 2026 guidance assumptions factored in ~ flat raw material inflation, we see little reason for the company to change these assumptions at this time. Our forecast of €1,476m is aligned with guidance of €1.47bn+, meaning we consider consensus too bearish.

Company consensus for AKE, Vara for Clariant, Solvay, Bloomberg for Syensqo, Borouge
Source: Company information, Bloomberg, Vara, Bernstein estimates and analysis

James Hooper +44 20 7676 6995 james.hooper@bernsteinsg.com

Two companies need to show accelerating growth in 2H - we have more concerns about Solvay. Our breakdowns of our modelled EBITDA growth for both companies are included in Exhibit 9 to Exhibit 11. For Syensqo, we are more comfortable with the elements of the hockey stick, with an electronics recovery supporting base EBITDA estimates if there is further weakness in other end markets. For Solvay, we model enough sequential underlying EBITDA improvement to reach 2026 guidance, assuming that the Sadara peroxides plant restarts by Q4, and there is no further major raw material inflation, as pricing in some divisions (e.g. silicas) is passed on with a lag. However, we are not modelling a further deterioration in either demand or soda ash pricing. This would cause downwards revisions to our estimates, and may lead to a change in guidance, albeit consensus is already relatively close to the bottom of guidance.

For Solvay's print we see risk-reward relatively negatively. Although we are modelling an in-line 2Q26 EBITDA result, even a small miss is likely to lead to serious investor concerns about Solvay's ability to reach the bottom of their guidance range, whilst even a small beat (e.g. c. ~€185m EBITDA) still means performance needs to be maintained in what could be a low-demand inflationary environment (Chemicals: Specialty or Commodity, with potentially tough times in between).

EXHIBIT 9: For our Syensqo modelling, we now only need to believe in a limited EBITDA from a pickup in Electronics or other business improvement for the base business to reach the €1.1bn guidance

MODEL UPDATES AND COMPANY UPDATE CALL NOTES

Air Liquide: We update our model for the free share allocation, which makes comparability with previous estimates not like for like. On an unchanged 28 P/E multiple, our Price Target therefore mechanically changes from €207 to €189. On a fundamental basis, our model is little changed.

Air Products: We raise our FY26 EPS estimate by 3c, and our FY27 EPS estimates are unchanged. On an unchanged FY26 multiple of 26x, our Price Target rises $1 to $345.

Akzo Nobel: Our 2026 EBITDA estimate is unchanged, at €1.48bn. Our valuation methodology (a scenario-based pro forma model for the Axalta merger) but a slight change in comparable multiples means our Price Target increases €1 to €60.

Arkema: We reduce our 2026 and 2027 EBITDA estimates by 1%, as we are now expecting a slightly softer 4Q26. Given the slight rebalance of the source of growth to the more commoditised divisions, we reduce our FY26 target multiple from 6.4x to 6.1x, which is halfway between the 10-year average EBITDA multiple and the average since Russian invaded Ukraine. This causes our Price Target to fall from €68 to €61.

Borouge: Based on the ongoing disruption in the UAE, we cut our 26E and 27E EBITDA estimates by -14% and -3% respectively; we still expect the impact of higher logistics costs to be concentrated in 2026. On an unchanged valuation methodology, our Price Target falls from AED2.48 to AED 2.45.

Clariant: We cut our 2026 EBITDA by 2%, with uncertainty on Catalysts later in the year. On an unchanged 6.25x EBITDA multiple, our Price Target declines from CHF 8.30 to CHF8.

Linde: We cut our 2026 and 2027 EPS by 8c and 10c, respectively, on expectations of slightly lower 4Q26 growth. On an unchanged 31x 2026 P/E multiple, our Price Target falls from $561 to $559.

PPG: We cut our 2026 and 2027 Adj. EPS estimates by 3c and 4c, respectively. On an unchanged 16.4x P/E multiple, the changes in EPS are not sufficient to change out $130 Price Target.

Solvay: We revise down our 2026 EBITDA estimates by €6m to €774m, just inside the lower bound of the guide. On an unchanged 6.0x 2026 EBITDA multiple, our Price Target falls 40c to €26.20.

Syensqo: We raise our 2026 EBITDA estimate by €7m. On an unchanged 8.25x multiple, this causes our Price Target to increase by €1 to €71.
