Benchmarking AI adoption across Australian retail & consumer coverage

AI is a transformative technology that has the potential to change the competitive position of Retail & Consumer companies within our coverage universe, both in absolute and relative to peers. We have leveraged the AI benchmarking analysis utilised by our US Softlines Retail peers. This scorecard of 6 components, with a score attributed (0, 0.5, 1) covers: (1) Supply Chain & Logistics; (2) Marketing; (3) Sales & Customer Experience; (4) Store Operations; (5) Organization & Support Functions; and (6) Product Development & Innovation. This data is based on publicly available information, which may not incorporate all progress in AI for each company with commerciality a possible reason for silence, while there may be an incentive for some companies to overstate the primacy of AI in their actions given increased investor focus. Despite these limitations, this is an important benchmark to provide an initial comparison across our coverage.

The highest share of AI uses across coverage, use cases and financial impact

Organisation & support (83% of relevant companies use across our coverage): uses include internal LLM tools, strategic partnerships, and governance. Marketing (83%): uses include personalised marketing, promotional optimisation, proprietary datasets, retail media, and content creation. Sales & customer experience (72%): uses include customer facing agents, search tools, contact centres, and quality control. Supply chain & logistics (72%): uses include demand & inventory forecasting, fulfilment & execution, AI in distribution centres, eCommerce, and weather forecasting. Store operations (44%): uses include frontline AI assistants, markdown tools, security & stock loss, rostering optimisation, eCommerce fulfilment, and agentic systems. Product development & innovation (21%): uses include product design & speed to market, range optimisation and consumer trend recognition. Key ROI drivers include lower CODB, lower COGS, higher revenue and working capital efficiency, noting these gains may be moderated by some AI headwinds for our coverage from a competition, consumer & cost perspective.

AI leaders in our coverage include WES, COL, WOW, EDV, BRG

AI is being used by all companies in our coverage, yet implementation & disclosure varies widely, favouring the larger names in our coverage. Of the 18 companies we analysed, only WES received a score of 1.0/1.0 which indicates meaningful AI adoption across all applicable dimensions. Other companies that scored well were COL (0.83), WOW (0.83), EDV (0.83) & BRG (0.80). Companies that did not score as well were PMV (0.08), UNI (0.17) & LOV (0.33), based on our analysis.

What are the attributes of the most well positioned companies using AI?

The attributes of companies most well positioned to harness the benefits of AI are evolving and not fully settled. To date, the attributes of the better positioned companies are: (1) large, high quality first-party data sets often from long standing loyalty programmes; (2) usage having evolved from quantity to sophistication, extending across the entire business rather than specific use cases so benefits compound; and (3) have significant in-house AI organisational capability including governance, with these companies able to access some of the financial benefits identified, although investment is required. Larger companies are initially better positioned, noting most companies in our coverage are large in their industry, while smaller companies are also able to benefit with specific projects able to drive improvement. We anticipate providing further use cases of AI across our coverage, with our US Softline Retail peers identifying 10 specific use cases, with use more advanced in the United States vs Australia.

For financial instruments admitted to trading on a non-EU regulated market: UBS may act as a market maker save that where this activity is carried out in the US in accordance with the definition given to it by the relevant laws and regulations, such activity will be specifically disclosed in this document. Options and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options". Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
