Global China Summit Takeaways (Day 3): AI drug discovery validation on the way; BD and global market focus; service sector update

Across meetings, management teams leaned into a consistent narrative: AI is moving from “promise” to measurable productivity (faster drug candidate generation, higher pipeline throughput, and deeper CMC integration), while China remains the near-term monetization engine through commercialization scale-up and BD-driven partnering. WuXi Bio reiterated its accelerated growth target for the next few years. MedBot pointed to hospital utilization ramp and KOL-backed global readiness, and Aier/Dashenlin reinforced how operational execution and revenue mix shift are central to sustaining growth and investor confidence.

- Insilico Medicine (Not Covered*): Validating AI through rapid pipeline asset number growth and major pharma deals. Management emphasized its ability to dramatically accelerate drug discovery, noting that its platform can generate a new preclinical candidate (PCC) in just 4.5 months on average. Viewing pipeline asset count as a key metric of its AI’s success, it proudly highlighted the generation of ~30 PCCs since 2021 to demonstrate this unmatched scale. To prove that the technology translates into the real world, it pointed to its lead drug, rentosertib, which successfully completed a Ph2a trial as a fully AI-designed molecule. Strategically, management is monetizing this high productivity through a dual-business model: advancing a large number of its pipeline assets for out-licensing, while securing major co-development deals with multinational partners such as Eli Lilly and Servier to fund ongoing research and validate its platform.
- WuXi Biologics: Mitigating geopolitical risk while shifting portfolio mix toward higher-margin complex biologics. Management reassured investors on geopolitical risk reduction by highlighting its active geographic capacity diversification in the US, EU and Singapore, and reinforcing a steadfast commitment to global clients. Commercially, it is driving a strategic portfolio shift beyond plain mAbs, which face margin compression, toward complex modalities such as bispecifics and ADCs, aiming to grow the multispecific business to 25% of the revenue mix in a few years. To support scale and efficiency, the company is increasingly embedding AI into its CMC (chemistry, manufacturing, and controls) and process development workflows, targeting the capacity to handle hundreds of IND (investigational new drug)-enabling packages annually to reduce wet lab work and maintain a competitive edge.
- Sino Biopharm: Building an AI-enhanced development engine anchored by late-stage assets. Management positioned the company as the commercial partner of choice in China, highlighting its distribution agreement for GSK’s bupropion (an antisense oligonucleotide hepatitis B virus therapy) as a cornerstone of its commercial strategy. Alongside advancing internal assets such as the M701 bispecific antibody (EpCAMxCD3) towards an anticipated 2026 NDA filing, it is focused on combining AI-driven target discovery with aggressive out-licensing efforts. Management’s core priority is to leverage this integrated development model to partner with multinationals seeking to commercialize novel, high-value drug modalities such as ADCs and siRNAs.

- Plenary Session: “Re-defining biopharma innovation: From drug discovery to business development”. The panel of leaders from Inscilico, Regor Therapeutics and LaNova focused on how AI is fundamentally changing the economics of drug discovery, allowing companies to generate up to four times more clinical candidates for the same R&D budget. Management teams agreed that value creation now hinges on an “East-to-West” strategy, where China biotechs must develop best-in-class assets to Western clinical standards to command premium global licensing deals. They stressed that AI is no longer just an early-discovery tool but is also actively being integrated across wet lab and CMC operations, projecting that AI-enabled pipelines backed by strong BD deals could drive significant top-line CAGRs for well-positioned biotechs by 2027–2028.
- Refractive ASP recovery and overseas expansion continue to be key drivers of Aier into 2H26. On the refractive business, the SMILE price war is structurally over following Zeiss’s decision to restrict SMILE 4.0 licensing only to large chains and public hospitals, restoring pricing discipline, with SMILE prices back above Rmb10,000; the V5 ICL lens was supply-constrained in 1Q but capacity is expected to normalize in 2H26, creating a visible volume as well as an ASP uplift catalyst for the segment. Overseas is another growth story: the Europe business will see sustained growth with margins above domestic levels, and a potential Brazil acquisition (~Rmb1 bn revenue, valuation <2x P/S, 40% stake) might be closed in 2H26. As for the proposed H-share listing, management confirmed that it had passed the IPO hearing on May 18 and the stock is expected to be listed by the end of 2026 at the earliest.
- Dashenlin’s ~10% FY26 growth target hinges on same-store recovery, restarted store expansion, and non-pharma category contribution. Management confirmed QoQ improvement in same-store sales, and maintained guidance of 2,000+ new franchise stores alongside 500 self-built and 400–500 acquired stores. Dashenlin is also executing a phased store-rearranging program (100 stores completed in 1Q, targeting 500 by the end of 1H26) to feature more non-pharma products. Unlike some of the other chains, Dashenlin is targeting higher gross margin for the non-pharma categories (30–40%), supported by its supply chain advantage and collaboration with some online-native brands to gain higher margins in exchange for offline distribution. It also utilized more private-label products, which typically carry higher GPMs.
- Duality’s (Not Covered*) most important near-term catalyst is the WCLC presentation of B7-H3 ADC (DB-1311)’s combo data with BioNTech’s PD-L1/VEGF bispecific in lung cancer, covering ORR and safety across approximately 150 enrolled first- and second-line NSCLC and SCLC patients. Management believes the competitive window in the bispecific antibody-plus-ADC combo space is narrow and closing: it estimates a two-year window before one of the three competing first-line lung cancer combo approaches (bispecific plus chemo, PD-1/PD-L1 plus ADC, or bispecific plus ADC) establishes itself as standard of care. Management also commented that the company is currently ahead of GSK/Hansoh’s competing B7-H3 ADC program, which is not expected to initiate Ph3 trials in prostate cancer until the end of 2026. Another differentiation case for DB1311 rests on a meaningfully cleaner safety profile, with Grade 3+ TRAE of only 20% as a single agent in CRPC (castration-resistant prostate cancer). The absence of on-target toxicity makes it better suited for front-line combo use. Financially, the company is in a strong position with Rmb3.5 bn in cash, US$100mn in expected 2026 milestone income, and annual R&D spend of approximately US$150 mn, providing a comfortable multi-year runway. The upcoming STAR Market listing, through which the company expects to raise Rmb4–6+ billion, depending on the A-share valuation, would provide additional liquidity to support co-development of B7-H3 ADC and HER2 ADC development, as well as other key assets such as DB-1419 (B7-H3/PD-L1 ADC).
- MedBot: driving commercial scale, KOL validation, and US market preparation. Management is focused on the commercial scale-up of the Toumai surgical robot, targeting a shift toward 60% OR utilization in key accounts by 2026 to capture China's price-sensitive hospital base. It heavily emphasized key opinion leader (KOL) validation—specifically citing Dr. Vipul Patel and a recent FDA-IDE approved USA-Africa telesurgery milestone—as definitive proof of the platform's global competitiveness. Financially, management believes sustainable profitability will come from manufacturing cost reductions, higher-margin service offerings, and expanding its active hospital footprint toward 800–1,000 sites. Management views near-term growth as China-led while laying the clinical groundwork for an eventual US market entry.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock’s expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts’ coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst’s coverage universe can be found on J.P.
