HQ Mgmt Meeting & G.O.L.D. Store Takes; Overweight Establishing $170 Price Target

We hosted a meeting and store tour at DLTR's Chesapeake VA headquarters with CEO Creedon, CFO Glendinning, CRO Konrad, and SVP of Investor Relations & Treasurer Delrosario and thought value-add to share our key takeaways and multi-year model implications.

I. Model Implications: Near-term, we raise 2Q EPS to $1.19 (above the Street at $1.09 / $1.00-$1.15 guide) based on +3.7% comps (> Consensus at +3.0%). We raise our FY26 EPS to $7.18 (above Consensus at $6.97 / $6.70-$7.10 guide), raise FY27 EPS to $8.24 (> Street at $7.67), and introduce a FY28 EPS estimate of $9.29 (10% above Consensus $8.46) with our model reflecting flow-through of mgmt's 6/25 $500M share repurchase announcement.

Remain Overweight establishing a Dec '27 price target of $170 based on 18x our FY28 EPS with incremental potential upside to our model across every line item. Specifically, we see (i) upside to 2Q & 2H26 same-store-sales (> 3-3.5% Consensus), (ii) upside to 2Q/2H26 & FY27/28 Consensus gross margin, (iii) FY27/FY28 SG&A efficiency opportunity, and (iv) Capital allocation opportunity ($4B+ incremental opportunity).

- On Risk/Reward: Bottom-up built, our FY27/FY28 model points to ~11% annual net income growth and a +14% EPS growth profile. Translated to equity value - peer regression for a low-to-mid-teens EBITDA margin and mid-single-digit top-line profile points to an 18x multiple and $170 equity value with linear regression (relative to DLTR's pre-pandemic 2017-19 top-line/margin profile) translating to a 20x multiple and $182 equity value.
- Applying our peer regression (18x) and linear regression (19.6x) multiples to fully loaded FY28 EPS power of $12+ (>$8.46 Consensus) points to an equity value upside range of $220 to $235.

II. Key Takeaways From Our Day At "The Tree" Headquarters:

Take #1: "Core" Store Initiatives Accelerating w/ ~20 Point Improvement In Standards . . . At the foundation, mgmt cited a 'core' focus on value, convenience, and discovery with G.O.L.D. standard store initiatives laid out by CEO Creedon at the June '23 Investor Day now "amplified" by CRO Konrad executing across four disciplines (i.e. 24-Hour Store Recovery, Freight In/Out in 48 Hours, Simplified In-Store Plan, and Price Clarity). To quantify progress, CEO Creedon cited ~33% of stores across the chain today stand below average grade standard – representing a ~20 point improvement in less than 12 months or relative to 52% cited below standard grade at the October 2025 analyst day with mgmt targeting 20% as a reasonable opportunity.

- 3 Incremental Opportunities Flagged On Our G.O.L.D. Store Tour: (i) Price Clarity: mgmt flagged that the aggregate number of price points in the store has been reduced to mid-teens relative to more than 30 different price points a year ago following red-stickering and targeting further reduction over time. In addition, color coded pricing strips will be rolled out

Summary Investment Thesis and Valuation

Investment Thesis

We rate DLTR Overweight. Multi-year, we see DLTR returning to a double-digit EPS “compounder” with top- and bottom-line drivers in place at the core DT banner (MPP 3.0 format store expansion) and idiosyncratic bottom-line drivers through tariff mitigation strategies, MPP expansion, 1x cost recapture, and corporate expense leverage following the sale of the FDO business (with capital allocation representing an incremental catalyst).

Valuation

chain-wide by the end of July (see Figure 1) making it simpler for in-store associates to stock shelves as well as the customer experience (w/ mgmt already citing “positive” customer reception following ~120 days of testing) and reducing friction with in-store labor (= SG&A labor efficiency opportunity), (ii) Multi-Price: multi-price-point SKUs (anything above $2 PP in the box) are transitioning into their respective categories across the store as current refreshes are complete, and (iii) “hip-printers” (see Figure 11) were introduced for associates in April reducing labor friction tied to labeling price points and inventory management.

... w/ Accelerating New Store Comp Waterfall Into FY27: Representing an incremental comp driver moving forward, our math points to an accelerating new store waterfall contribution to same-store-sales growth in FY27 of +125bps (vs. +100bps contribution the trailing 3 years on our estimates), which historically has been cited as a 4-year maturity curve with new stores outperforming vs. chain average in their first 3 years of maturity. Recall, DLTR in 2022 (in the midst of the FDO turnaround) had slowed the pace of its new store openings to less than 150 doors and ~350 openings in 2023, which has represented a constraint to the new store waterfall contribution (vs. DLTR sustaining a pace of at least 400 new openings in each year from 2024 onwards). Representing incremental upside to the potential new store waterfall lift – we note: (i) 3.0 MPP within new stores going forward (with the entire existing fleet also converted to 3.0 by 2026-end) and (ii) improving store standards with “massive learnings” from the customer over the past 12 months and continued progress on CRO Konrad’s G.O.L.D. standard.

Take #2: 2H June $1 Price Point Reintroduction = Forward “Optionality”. On the reintroduction of select $1 items in the store (launched on 6/12 as flagged in our 6/26 Boss’ Eye), CEO Creedon cited the initiative to date checks both the Value and Discovery buckets of the company’s 3 box merchandising grid (Value, Convenience, Discovery) specifically noting “if we like it, we can keep it”. Specifically, on progression, management noted the reintroduction of $1 items tied to the company’s 40th Anniversary was cited as a small run today, with greater opportunity into the back half of the year with Back-to-school & Halloween in 3Q, followed by Thanksgiving & Christmas in 4Q. Further, CEO Creedon cited “a number of Ours in the water today” across (i) 40th Anniversary price reinvestments tied to tariff refunds, with $1 WOW! tables at the front of the store (i.e. seasonal dinnerware, glowsticks, summer toys), and (ii) seasonal endcaps noting size/scale advantages with vendor relationships translating to a “monthly new muscle” (i.e. Gatorade now $1.75 vs. $2.50 prior, Energizer at $5.00 vs. $8.50 prior, Hot Wheels at $1.25 vs. Toy Category at $1.75 opening price). Importantly, CEO Creedon cited learnings as most important noting the company will have a very good read on traffic and unit velocity by year-end. To that point, management noted DLTR’s back-end buying model allows the company to “architect” product to the same exact margin profile at the $1 price point provided effective lead times. Tying the $1 re-introduction back to the model, our work points to the potential for exit rate traffic to inflect to positive growth in 2Q26 (> 2H expectations), with 3Q26 on tap to receive a “double” traffic catalyst on easier comparisons YOY (lapping trough sentiment tied to red stickering) and the WOW! Price reinvestment. Specifically, management noted continued improvement in price sentiment throughout 1Q with 80% of the assortment SKUs unique to Dollar Tree (= only 10% LFL & 10% similar to competitors) having exited 2025 with a much sharper price proposition (w/ JPM pricing analysis pointing to low-to-mid-single-digit price delta in consumables and mid-teens price delta in discretionary relative to mass).

Take #3: Structural Foundation Built For Multi-Price-Point Inflection: Looking ahead, management cited MPP 3.0 conversions across the fleet remain on-track to be completed by the end of FY26 (~2,000 to be completed this year), and noted MPP stands at only 16% of the assortment today. Recall, 3.0 MPP conversions were first introduced in 1Q24 to include “in-line” configurations of MPP product placed within relevant aisles throughout the entire store (vs. a dedicated DT Plus section/aisle prior) creating a more cohesive and convenient shopping experience. Incremental to the current 3.0 doors today - management noted color-coding shelving strips to be rolled out across the store base by the end of July, coinciding with MPP units starting to move in-line with respective categories (i.e. detergent sitting on the bottom shelf with specific yellow strip coding signaling the pricing range). Overall, CEO Creedon cited the multi-price-point strategy as in “super early innings today” with clear runway referencing DOL in Canada at ~85% MPP (and previously citing Action in Europe at ~60% MPP). Representing the next leg of MPP - mgmt cited a strong foundation in place today after (i) 2.5 years of 3.0 MPP “learnings” taken to the store setup and curation of assortment driving sequential improvement in execution throughout each event (vs. the initial in-line configuration introduction in 1Q24), and (ii) merchants having a “larger field of play” (relative to 2 years ago only chasing available domestic product), importantly with 2+ year lead times in certain categories. On categories, our work points to opportunity across Hardware/Auto, Health & Beauty (w/ “weekly newness” & “untapped” social media/influencer activation in the category), and branded product noting size/scale advantages with its vendor base (i.e. DLTR introducing $10 Tide Detergent representing a new high-price point).

Take #4: Multi-Year Gross Margin Runway w/ Expanding Drivers Into FY27 . . . A key takeaway from our meeting and model build is an “under-promise” approach to multi-year gross margin relative to “up modestly” (~10bps by our work) annual expansion from FY26-F28 as laid out at the October 2025 analyst day. To this point, management cited an “aggressive” approach to driving more volume through the box with the company’s back-end buying model sufficient to hold multi-year gross margins flat to FY26 levels alone. Two Accelerating GPM Drivers By Our Work: (1) Supply Chain efficiency: targeting ~800 stores through a single DC relative to ~600 prior (w/ 2029 timeline by our work), representing a more than 20% improvement in DC productivity by our math. In addition, mgmt previously cited at the 10/15 Investor Day replacing legacy tech systems with AI-enabled platforms to “flow product more reliably to stores, reduce out of stocks and improve our cost structure at scale” & higher capacity/productivity within existing facilities to increase the DC to Store ratio “with only limited capital investment”. (2) MPP Scale: CEO Creedon cited scale opportunity with multi-price point volumes tied to appropriate lead-times and knowledge today of customer reception per category relative to the initial year 1 rollout in 2019, which can lead to greater leverage with vendors as DLTR looks to scale volumes of MPP product. In addition, recall, management cited at the 10/15 Investor Day MPP items deliver higher margin dollars per item per basket, driving increasing fixed cost leverage within the box (w/ the Halloween '25 assortment as an example drove +25% higher margin dollars despite selling 10% fewer units). (3) Shrink: Despite initial progress on shrink seen within 1Q26, mgmt cited continued opportunity remaining with Shrink, noting roughly 60% of product in the box is non-branded “private label-esque” carrying very little “Street value” in a resale scenario and our estimates pointing to +80bps of Shrink recapture opportunity relative to 2019 within gross margin. Translating this to the P/L - we raise our FY27/FY28 model to +10bps annual gross margin expansion (= October '25 algorithm) with >100bps of multi-year opportunity by our math (= upside to our model) associated with supply chain efficiency, multi-price-point scale, and shrink recapture representing incremental potential upside.

- . . . w/ 3 Areas of Potential Upside Cited Relative to the FY26 Flat “Baseline”: As a reminder, management’s 5/28 outlook embedded a “roughly flat” gross margin “baseline” outlook for FY26. Importantly, CFO Glendinning cited three areas of potential upside to FY26’s margin outlook: (1) Freight favorability specifically citing “fuel in a much better place” than at the time of the call with Oil prices now ~21% lower since the 5/28 EPS call (w/ mgmt embedding favorable tariff rates across 2Q/3Q fully offsetting incremental freight headwinds, by our math, pointing to ~50bps of freight upside by our model across 2H). (2) potential gross tariffs upside, if current Section 122 rates extend past July (w/ mgmt embedded tariff tailwinds across 2Q/3Q before a reversion back to IEEPA rates in 4Q, pointing to ~50bps of incremental upside in 4Q). (3) tariff refunds, assuming reinvestments into the business (w/ $110M received through 5/26 or ~$0.40 EPS tailwind on 100% flow-through, and our gross profit dollar math pointing to mid-single-digit comp upside opportunity across 2Q-4Q. Put together, we see +40bps of potential gross margin upside (= freight + gross tariffs) relative to management's Flat guide for FY26 (2H-weighted opportunities), translating to $0.30 of EPS upside relative to our published model.

Take #5: SG&A Efficiency Opportunity Into FY27 Improves Flow-Through: Regarding SG&A expenses, management cited labor as the largest contribution to expenses at ~60% of overall SG&A, with wage inflation favorably moderating already in FY26 (+3-3.5% forecasted by economists for 2026 < +MSD% increases experienced in the trailing 2 years) with mgmt noting a multi-year idiosyncratic opportunity to drive greater efficiency on labor from improved workforce management (potential low to mid single digit savings opportunity by our fieldwork). To this point (& not embedded in our model)— full flow-through of a 3.5% reduction (midpoint of low to mid-single-digits) in Store Labor expenses within SG&A would represent an incremental ~$0.50 of EPS power vs. our current model reflecting 10bps of SG&A leverage in each of FY27/28E on our 3.5% comp. Representing a key inflection point moving into FY27, we note mgmt noted the workforce management system rollout underway and expected to go live by FY26-end. Further, mgmt noted pressure across both general liabilities and utilities having increased higher than inflation over the trailing 12 months, albeit noting “specific actions” now in-place today (similar to action plans around managing shrink) for general liabilities and energy management systems in place for utilities (= 30bps recapture opportunity on General Liabilities by our math, or $0.25 incremental EPS opportunity, not in our model). Put together, assuming core wage inflation of ~3.35% (as forecasted by JPM economists in FY27/28), in addition to workforce management savings flow-through and general liability recapture, our math points to ability for 50bps of annual SG&A leverage at a 3.5% comp on full flow-through (= $0.75 EPS power incremental upside to our model).

Take #6: Digging Deeper On Capital Priorities: On capital allocation, management noted a dividend as something the “board will consider” over time, though citing preference for share repurchases as “the best return” for shareholders at the moment. To that point, mgmt's +16-23% EPS growth YOY outlook in FY26 excludes any additional share repurchases (outside of the $98M shares that were repurchased after 1Q-end) with the 6/25 announcement of an incremental $500M of repurchases translating to an implied EPS growth outlook of +19-26% YOY, by our math. Additionally, DLTR announced on 6/2 the board authorized a replenishment of the $2.5B share repurchase authorization, with ~$700M remaining following the $500M repurchase announced on 6/25 (= ~$1.8B replenishment). Tied to the release, CEO Creedon cited “The replenishment of our share repurchase authorization reinforces our commitment to disciplined capital allocation and reflects our confidence in Dollar Tree's long-term growth”. Looking ahead, management's FY26-28 algorithm by our work translates to ~$2.4B in annual operating cash flow generation, offset by ~$1B in annual capital expenditures, translating to ~$1.3B of annual free cash flow generation or $4B+ of FY26-28 buyback capacity (= +MSD% TSR accretion opportunity w/ DLTR's leverage ratio at ~2x, below mgmt's <2.5x target).

III. Key Store Tour Takeaways:

Store Take #1. 40th Anniversary Reinvestment Opportunity - $1 PP Optionality: We observed 40th Anniversary WOW! reinvestments (following $110M in tariff refunds through 5/26) with DLTR moving on offense to generate traffic. Management noted “speed tables” at the front of the store for $1 product (see Figures 1 & 2) to emphasize value.

Store Take #2. Size/Scale Advantage = Greater Value: Across categories – management highlighted select use of endcaps to flag DLTR’s value-proposition on key name brands (i.e. $1.75 Gatorade, $5 Energizer), with management noting opportunity to leverage size/scale advantages in vendor relationships to provide additional value.

Store Take #3. Integrating MPP In-Line w/ Assortment: We observed multi-price-point items starting to move in-line with respective categories across the store (following select store refreshes) on the bottom row, with mgmt noting an easier customer shopping experience relative to exclusive MPP isles. To that point, we see a potential increase of MPP attach rates as a result of the actions, notably among the “core” shopper being able to see relative value in the same section instead of potentially avoiding the higher priced isles previously (i.e. FIVE seeing an increase in attachment rates after moving FIVE Beyond in-line w/ respective categories).

Store Take #4. Focus On Customer & Associate Experience: We observed color-coded pricing strips (to be rolled out across the chain by July-end) used to signal specific price points across categories, making it easier for (i) customers to shop the box (w/ roughly mid-teens price points in stores today relative to 30+ post-tariffs), and (ii) associates to reduce in-store labor tied to labeling. We also note DLTR introducing “hip-printers” for associates in April, reducing labor friction with a mobile handheld printer for labels and tags.

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

Dollar Tree, Inc. (Overweight; Price Target: $170.00)

Investment Thesis

We rate DLTR Overweight. Multi-year, we see DLTR returning to a double-digit EPS “compounder” with top- and bottom-line drivers in place at the core DT banner (MPP 3.0 format store expansion) and idiosyncratic bottom-line drivers through tariff mitigation strategies, MPP expansion, 1x cost recapture, and corporate expense leverage following the sale of the FDO business (with capital allocation representing an incremental catalyst).

Valuation

We are establishing a Dec '27 price target of $170 (vs. $160 Dec '26 prior) based on 18x our FY28E EPS (= peer regression analysis).

Risks to Rating and Price Target

A decline in the economic climate, particularly the employment picture, could negatively affect consumer spending and the dollar store industry. Furthermore, a change in the competitive landscape as related to promotional activity or the ability to pass along price increases from other discount retailers and large-box competitors could negatively or positively impact same-store-sales growth and overall profitability. Rising energy prices, fuel in particular, could impact both the operational side of the dollar store industry and its targeted customers' spending behavior. A greater than expected increase in energy prices could impact costs of products and materially affect transportation costs and could negatively impact the overall discretionary spend of the targeted low- to middle-income customer.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe). NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
