

Hong Kong Property

After one overhang, here comes another one

Over the past 2 weeks, the sector has underperformed the HSI by 7% due to concerns over tighter capital outflow controls in Mainland China (more discussion in our reports on 29 May and 3 Jun). Then, over the weekend, a new overhang emerged: the reignited concerns about rate hikes (driven by strong US labor data). While we do not think these two overhangs alone will derail the housing market recovery (home prices have jumped 9.6% YTD (Figure 4), and we maintain our full-year forecast of 10-15% for FY26), the uncertainties will likely weigh on sentiment for a while, and thus we expect the sector to face some near-term pressure. However, we remain constructive on the HK housing market as we believe it is more driven by the strength in the financial industry & inventory (report), though only continually solid data (e.g. prices/sales volume/sell-through rates) will abate investors' concerns. In the near term, we believe Sino & CKA may relatively outperform due to net cash, while Henderson may underperform as it is more affected by the two overhangs (Henderson is more exposed to Kai Tak (Figure 3) and more sensitive to rates (Figure 6)). Meanwhile, SHKP may also be prone to profit-taking due to its still-strong YTD outperformance (30% over the HSI) (Figure 13). However, on dips, we suggest long-term investors accumulate SHKP, Sino, Swire Prop & HLP.

- Existing overhang - Potential tighter capital outflow controls: For this concern, we already discussed our thoughts in Will tightened controls on capital outflows, if true, derail the upcycle? published on 29 May and Implications of State Council's Regulations on Outbound Investment published on 3 Jun. As a recap: (1) So far there is no official ban on Mainland Chinese buying properties in HK; (2) capital outflow control is not new; (3) even in the worst scenario where all "Mainland China-based Mainland Chinese" cease to be homebuyers in HK, we estimate they account for 5-10% of volume (10-15% by value), but we believe "HK-based Mainland Chinese" should see limited impact; the majority of buyers remain locals; (4) if the concern materializes, high-end properties in Kai Tak will be the most affected as "Mainland China-based Mainland Chinese" buyers are the majority in this segment (Table 2).
- New overhang - Reignited fear of a rate hike: Over the weekend, strong labor data in the US has driven concerns of a rate hike scenario again. J.P. Morgan currently maintains the forecast of a rate pause till 1Q27 (report). However, if the US Fed Funds Rate is raised, Hong Kong prime rate may follow and thus mortgage rates may turn higher (Figure 5). That said, if the rates pause at current levels, HK homebuyers would still be enjoying a marginally positive carry (Figure 5) (headline mortgage rate 3.25%, but effective mortgage rate 2.9-3.0% if including cash rebates, vs. net rental yield 3.0%). Meanwhile, a US rate hike may also cause some upward pressure on HIBOR, although for now we believe if HIBOR stays between 2-3%, this should be largely within investors' expectations (>3% would be a negative surprise). For homebuyers, higher mortgage rates are directionally negative, but do not necessarily cause a downcycle (as seen in 2004-06; 16-18, during which both HK property stocks & home prices went up despite rate hikes). For property companies, a higher HIBOR would hurt earnings, and based on our sensitivity analysis, within our coverage, NWD & Henderson will be more impacted, while Sino & CKA will be the least impacted (Figure 6). For more discussion, please see our earlier report HK Property: What if there is a rate hike?.

- The two overhangs have not yet materialized, but concerns may only abate with continually solid data: For the concern about capital outflow control, while there might be more clarity when the State Council publishes more detailed guidelines for individual investors, we doubt whether there will be explicit mentions of home buying in HK (as the recent crackdown seems to target illegal cross-border investment activities only, at least for now). Therefore, we think there is a chance there will not be any official clarification. If not, then investors' concerns may only abate upon the resiliency of key housing data, such as home prices, sell-through rates of primary launches (only for those with market prices, not those with aggressive premiums or discounts), and secondary sales volume.
- Sector valuation: The sector is trading at a 47% NAV discount, which is close to 1 s.d. below the historical mean (48%) (Figure 14). Alternatively, the sector is trading at a 4.4% dividend yield, which is 0.5 s.d. above the historical average (Figure 16). Arguably, the sector's valuations are not stretched, and a significant derating is unlikely as long as home prices remain at least stable. However, HK Property remains one of the better-performing sectors YTD (+12% vs. the HSI -3%) (Figure 12), on the back of a solid recovery in the housing market (home prices have rebounded almost 10% year-to-date), retail sales bottoming out, and office seeing a K-shaped stabilization. Assuming no further additional overhangs, we expect <10% downside from here. On dips, we suggest long-term investors accumulate: (1) SHKP: likely continual MSD% growth in EPS & DPS over the next 2-3 years; (2) Sino Land: 5% yield with high dividend certainty; (3) Swire Prop: Mainland China retail continues to improve, with HK office bottoming out; 5.6% yield with 5% p.a. DPS growth; (4) HLP: Mainland China tenant sales likely to outperform; 6.6% yield with high certainty.

Overhang #1) Tighter capital outflow control in Mainland China

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
