AI Defensibility Underappreciated; Q TWO Top-Pick, ALKT High-Conviction Take-Out Candidate, More Constructive on NCNO

We are rolling forward our valuation framework to Dec-27 across our banking technology/digital banking coverage and come away with a constructive view on the group, whereby AI-defensibility concerns appear overstated relative to the entrenched workflow, data, and compliance moats these vendors have built. Our highest-conviction ideas remain Q2 (Q TWO) and Alkami (ALKT), both Overweight, which operate in a consolidated, duopolistic digital banking market with long contract durations, strong gross retention, and clear pathways to meaningful margin and FCF expansion—characteristics we believe should command premium multiples in a fundamentals-driven tape. ALKT screens as our high-conviction takeout candidate amid renewed activist pressure and supportive ownership dynamics, while Q TWO offers the cleaner organic compounding story with a large underpenetrated TAM and conservative capital allocation. On nCino (NCNO), we maintain our Neutral rating given a less consolidated end market and a comparatively less crystallized AI narrative, but following this week's headquarters visit (see detailed notes here) we are incrementally more positive on the company's AI defensibility, and the valuation looks compelling.

- In a fundamentals-driven tape, we think Q2 (Q TWO) would be an outperformer. The company operates in a duopolistic competitive landscape, and has a large, underpenetrated TAM of ~250M digital banking accounts at regional/community banks and credit unions. Only ~20% are on modern platforms. The company benefits from long 5-7 year contracts and only ~400-500 annual renewals reinforcing strong revenue visibility. Management currently guides 12.5-13.0% subscription growth for FY27: we view management's guidance as the floor for growth in FY27 and the medium term. Management's soft guidance implies about over 1,000 bps of EBITDA margin expansion over the next five years (24% in FY25 to ~35% in FY30). The company has no debt, and is already achieving >90% FCF conversion. We expect capital to primarily be deployed towards share repurchases; transformational M&A is not off the table, but management maintains a conservative, value-orientated stature toward M&A. We view 15x EV/EBITDA for FY27 as an extremely fair price for a company with these characteristics. We establish our Dec-27 PT of $60/sh (nearly 40% upside), versus $80/sh for Dec-26E previously.
- Alkami (ALKT) as a high-conviction takeout candidate. Alkami (ALKT) is our high-conviction takeout candidate, with activist investor Jana Partners reportedly pushing the company to restart a sale process (link here). Alkami stands out within software coverage due to its mission-critical positioning, durable growth runway, and clear margin/FCF expansion pathway. We view Q2 as Alkami's one, formidable competitor. Alkami is more AI-defensible than the market assumes, as digital banking requires complex integrations, compliance readiness, and careful implementation that AI-native entrants cannot shortcut, reflected in gross retention consistently above 98% with churn primarily driven by customer M&A rather than competition. Private equity is viewed as the most likely acquirer since strategics like FIS, Fiserv, and Jack Henry have more legacy offerings and face ecosystem conflicts, while a sponsor could preserve processor neutrality and underwrite meaningful operating leverage (modeled at ~18% EBITDA margin and low-60s% FCF/EBITDA conversion in 2026E). Ownership dynamics further support a strategic path, with General Atlantic nearly doubling its stake to close to one-fifth of shares outstanding since July 2025. We view 17x 2027E EV/EBITDA as a reasonable multiple, given the company's growth profile and stickiness. We assign a +2x multiple premium to Alkami versus Q2, due to the company's higher takeout potential. We establish our Dec-27 PT of $19/sh (about 30% upside), versus $20/sh for Dec-26E previously.

- Incrementally positive on AI defensibility on nCino (NCNO). Following the nCino headquarters visit in Wilmington, NC—where investors engaged directly with nCino's CEO, CFO, CTO, and co-founder—we come away more positive on nCino's AI defensibility, grounded in how deeply embedded the platform is within commercial banking workflows and reinforced by tangible AI traction in products like Banking Advisor, Digital Partners, and continuous credit monitoring. Co-founder Pullen Daniel's field perspective was particularly compelling: customers are largely indifferent to the underlying model so long as nCino owns the governance and regulatory burden, and the build-vs-buy calculus still favors nCino given that coding is only a fraction of the effort relative to design, testing, governance, and ongoing support. We maintain our Neutral rating—versus Overweight on QTWO and ALKT, which benefit from more consolidated end markets and clearer AI defensibility narratives—but nCino's valuation looks compelling at current levels, and the bundled intelligence-unit monetization model insulates customers from token-cost volatility while keeping conversations anchored on outcomes. Net-net, we are incrementally less concerned about AI-native disruption near term, as banks continue to find AI-native entrants short of enterprise readiness on historical data access and third-party risk management, leaving nCino's contextual data and embedded workflow moat intact. We establish our Dec-27 PT of $17/sh, versus $16/sh for Dec-26E previously.

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

Q2 Holdings (Overweight; Price Target: $60.00)

Investment Thesis

Of the innovators in the digital banking space, QTWO leads amongst large financial institutions. QTWO provides an end-to-end digital banking platform, supporting delivery of retail, SMB, and commercial functionalities. The platform is highly customizable, allowing customers to develop their own unique extensions of and integrations to their digital platform. QTWO has more than 1,200 financial institution customers, including more than 40% of the top 100 U.S. Banks and more than 40% of the top 100 U.S. Credit Unions, based on total assets.

Valuation

YE27 $60/sh PT implies a 15x EV/EBITDA multiple for 2027E. Our price target multiple is in line with where high-quality Vertical Software companies currently trade. We believe this is justified due to QTWO's large market opportunity, market leading position, strong and improving cash generation profile, as well as AI defensibility.

Risks to Rating and Price Target

Risks to Downside

Elongated sales cycles could lead to earnings risk. Consistent with vertical software, Q2 has long sales cycles that can span three to 24 months. Any further elongation from macro or industry pressure could lead to lower-than-expected revenue growth, which could impair stock performance.

Weakness in regional bank and credit union industry could lead to poorer sentiment.

Q2's target customer base is the largest ~2,000 financial institutions in United States, excluding the ultra-large money centers (e.g., JPMorgan Chase). Weakness in this space—or banking failures—could lead to negative sentiment or earnings risk for Q2.

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

Alkami (Overweight; Price Target: $19.00)

Investment Thesis

Of the innovators in the digital banking space, Alkami leads amongst the credit unions, whereas QTWO's forte is the banking space. Like QTWO, Alkami provides an end-to-end digital banking platform, supporting delivery of retail, SMB, and commercial functionalities. There is an imperative for U.S. credit unions and regional banks to modernize. We think this is likely to continue for at least another decade, supporting the durability of Alkami's growth. The financial institutions are looking for an outsourcing partner that could help them enable onboarding and better engagement of new users and improve operational efficiency. Alkami is unique in that it is built on a cloud-native, multi-tenant architecture. Alkami built its platform on a single code base, and ensures a continuous delivery platform to provide significant speed to market and implementation for clients.

Valuation

YE27 $19/sh PT implies a 17x EV/EBITDA multiple for 2027E. Our price target multiple is at the higher-end of the range versus where Vertical Software companies currently trade. We believe this is justified due to ALKT's large market opportunity, solid organic growth profile, as well as AI defensibility. We assign a slight premium to ALKT versus QTWO due to higher take-out risk probability.

Risks to Rating and Price Target

Risks to Downside

Weakness in regional bank and credit union industries could lead to poorer stock sentiment. Alkami's target customer base is the largest ~2,000 financial institutions in United States, excluding the ultra-large money centers (e.g., JPMorgan Chase). Weakness in this space—or banking failures—could lead to negative sentiment or earnings risk for Alkami.

Alkami is semi-acquisitive—failure to monetize and integrate these acquisitions could lead to share underperformance. Alkami recently acquired MANTL (2025), Segmint (2022), MK Decisioning Systems (2021), and ACH Alert (2020). Failure to invest in these businesses and drive cross-sell could lead to less-than-expected earnings potential for the company, causing shares to underperform.

Alkami's share price is sensitive to its forecast growth rates. Slower-than-expected growth is likely to have a negative impact on share performance.

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

nCino (Neutral; Price Target: $17.00)

Investment Thesis

nCino uniquely benefits from industry experience in both banking and technology, having been spun out as a separate company from a bank in late 2011. Its aim was to help other financial institutions with the challenges plaguing the industry. These challenges include cumbersome legacy technology, fragmented data, disconnected business functions, and a disengaged workforce that makes it difficult to maintain relevancy to clients. The company is also built on a single-code base. We also note nCino has a high-quality roster of customers. The company touts 15 out of the top 30 banks in the US, five of the top seven in the U.K. and Ireland, and three of the top five in APAC.

Valuation

YE27 $17/sh PT implies a 9x EV/EBITDA multiple for CY 2027E (ending Dec-2027).

Our price target multiple is at the lower-end of the range versus where Vertical Software companies currently trade, but ahead of companies we expect to be meaningfully disrupted by AI proliferation. We believe this is justified due to NCNO's less-attractive competitive positioning versus companies in the FinTech spaces, such as QTwo and ALKT. We also believe there are more clear beneficiaries of AI proliferation.

Risks to Rating and Price Target

Risk to Upside: nCino is in the midst of a transformational change, which could be positive for earnings momentum and be supportive of share performance. The company is changing its pricing model, cutting R&D costs, reinvesting in S&M, and expecting subscription revenue to begin accelerating in a few quarters. Should it be successful implementing these strategies, the market could reward the shares, trading them higher.

Risk to Upside: nCino could rely more on third-party system integrations, versus performing these functions internally, which could lead to higher-than-expected earnings. nCino has reported negative services margins multiple times in the past 12 months. The company already has partnerships with best-in-class system integrators, such as Accenture, Deloitte, PwC, and West Monroe Partners. They are usually enlisted to implement and configure the nCino Platform for larger FI customers, whereas nCino has historically performed professional services for smaller FIs itself. Higher use of SIs across its customer base could lead to higher margins for nCino.

Risk to Downside: Certain nCino products are built on Salesforce – nCino's share price can be negatively affected by any compromise to its Salesforce partnership. Fundamental elements of the nCino Platform are built on the Salesforce platform, including nCino's client onboarding, loan origination, and deposit account opening solutions. The agreement runs through January 2031. Any termination of the relationship with Salesforce would result in a materially adverse impact on nCino's business.

Risk to Downside: nCino recently transitioned to a new CEO – internal and external leadership failures could lead to share underperformance. nCino's founding CEO, Pierre Naude, recently resigned. Naude has been the CEO since the company's founding and is moving to the Executive Chairman role. Sean Desmond succeeded the former CEO. It will be important to maintain the innovation and elements essential to the continued growth of the business under new leadership. Any failure to do so may have an adverse impact on the results of operations and financial condition.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
