Apr 26 NBS data: Weakening domestic demand to be partially offset by exports; macro and supply are stronger short-term drivers

China's April activity data came in broadly below expectations, with industrial production recording its steepest MoM contraction in three years (link to report). Across our coverage universe, base metals face growing headwinds as US rate hike expectations intensify amid slowing global growth and persistent inflationary pressures. SHFE Aluminum prices hovered at ~RMB 24–25k/t, supported by a structural global supply deficit amid Middle East disruptions and persistent tightness through 2026. Lithium spot briefly touched RMB 200k/t but has since pulled back to ~RMB 190k/t, supported by resilient ESS demand and a recovery in EV adoption driven by elevated oil prices, though we are beginning to see early signs of a mine supply response. For coal and steel, prices have shown a slight recovery, but sustainability hinges on downstream demand follow-through and whether policy-led supply discipline can have a material impact. Zijin Mining remains our top pick despite near-term sentiment being pressured by hawkish repricing. We also like Chalco and China Hongqiao, with the pace of destocking being a key catalyst.

- April property data came in underwhelming: NBS figures showed signs of deterioration relative to March. New starts declined 27% YoY (vs. -17% in Mar26 YoY and -22% in Apr25 YoY). Completions remained depressed, though the pace of contraction has moderated, falling 19% YoY in April (flat vs. Mar26). Real estate investment stayed subdued at -20% YoY (down vs. -12% Feb26). While home prices continue to show signs of stabilization, JPM property analyst Karl Chan expects new starts to remain weak over the next few months due to soft land sales volume in 1Q26. The new forecast expects a -18% YoY and -19% YoY decline in new starts and completions, respectively, implying a -16% and -17% decline for the rest of the year (link to report).

- FAI growth slowed significantly in April. In April, total FAI growth declined sharply by 12% YoY (vs. +1.7% YoY in 1Q26), with manufacturing FAI declining by 4% YoY and 16% MoM, reversing from the growth trend in 1Q26 (+4% YoY) amidst energy-shock disruptions. Infrastructure FAI declined by 3% YoY and 24% MoM in April (vs. +9% 1Q26).

- April crude steel output fell 3% YoY; steel product exports declined 9% YoY. China's crude steel production came in at 84mt in April, down 3% YoY, representing an improvement from 1Q26 and bringing 4M26 cumulative output to 331mt, down 4% YoY. The downtrend persists, with early-May CISA key members' daily output at 2.11mn tons (-4.3% YoY). April finished steel exports totaled 9.5mt (-9% YoY, vs. -10% 1Q26 avg). We expect a near-term recovery in steel exports driven by resurgent Middle East demand following tension de-escalation, even as the tailwind from EU front-loading — which supported Q1 volumes — fades under quota constraints. On margins, we are seeing a cost-driven steel price rally since the second half of April, with margins improving off the lows (the share of profitable mills rising to 64% now from 48% in early April; however, with still-sluggish domestic demand and elevated input costs continuing to weigh, we expect no material margin recovery until meaningful policy follow-through materializes.

- April raw coal output edged down 1% YoY; imports fell 13% YoY. China's raw coal production reached 386mt in April (-1% YoY), bringing 4M26 cumulative output to 1,589mt (flat YoY). Raw coal imports declined 13% YoY to 33.1mt in April. Domestic coal prices continue to trend higher, with QHD 5,500kcal reaching ~RMB 830/t. Total coal inventory across the 6 major IPPs remained at a moderate level of ~13mn tons as of mid-May, broadly in line with year-ago levels. Coal demand in 2Q typically softens on seasonal dynamics, but we see upside risk from stronger coal-fired generation should China's export-oriented industrial activity pick up, translating into higher thermal power consumption. Inventory levels in late May and June remain a key watch point.

- April 2026 aluminum production rose 3.1% YoY; the SHCJ–LME spread widened further. China produced 3.9mt of aluminum in March 2026 (+3.1% YoY), with exports increasing to 600kt in the month (+15% YoY). China's aluminum social inventory continues to hover around 1.4mt on the back of elevated prices, as buyers remain price-sensitive. Our channel checks indicate that demand is showing early signs of recovery heading into May, though this has yet to translate into meaningful destocking. With no material change in the status of operational suspensions at key ME smelters, we expect inventory drawdowns to materialize through the remainder of 2Q26, albeit at a slow pace as price levels remain a key factor in downstream procurement decisions. The S/D impact on overseas markets should be more pronounced than in China — our regional team points out that petroleum coke, a key raw material in carbon anode production, could present further supply challenges for ex-Gulf aluminum output (link to report). With Chinese downstream purchasing still heavily influenced by price, we expect the SHFE–LME spread to continue widening into 2Q26.

- 2Q26 lithium S/D sees more moving factors. April 2026 China auto production fell 2.6% YoY, while NEV production rose 3.8% YoY, continuing to show signs of stabilization following two consecutive months of double-digit declines. With oil price tailwinds continuing to accelerate NEV adoption, NEV PV retail penetration surpassed the 60% milestone in April (link to report). BloombergNEF raised its 2026 ESS capacity installation estimates by ~30% (60% of the increment from China), supported by 15th FYP policies, capacity payments, and spot power market liberalization (link to report). Downstream procurement appetite remains firm, with Ganfeng noting buyer willingness to lock in volumes at up to Rmb250k/t levels, suggesting a supportive floor for near-term pricing. Spot lithium carbonate prices have surged above RMB 190k/t, with weekly inventory hovering around 101-103kt—still a relatively low level. On the supply side, signals are mixed: Jiangxi CATL has not resumed operations and other Jiangxi mines remain subject to compliance requirements, continuing to constrain domestic output, but we are seeing supply response elsewhere—Mineral Resources announced the restart of its Bald Hill lithium mine (~165ktpa of spodumene concentrate, on care and maintenance since Nov 2024), with first production targeted for July and initial shipments in 1Q FY27, while Zimbabwe concentrate shipments have begun this week as we previously expected, with cargoes set to arrive in Jun–Jul.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period. J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
