Skyworks posted solid results, somewhat surprising in light of smartphone pressures, and sees potential for the Qorvo deal to close ahead of schedule. Suspension of dividend makes sense but will be disruptive.

Key Takeaways

- Smartphone business tracking despite memory headwinds, with somewhat lower Apple content headwinds vs. expectations & August pixel launch
- Broad markets mixed, with strong auto & data center but weaker IoT
- Qorvo deal could close this year; QRVO #s also solid pointing to significant accretion
- Suspension of the dividend will disrupt the share price but provides a strong value opportunity
- Headwinds keep us EW but we do see strong value opportunity for patient investors

Mobile demand remains stable, although it is still early to assess the ultimate impact of higher memory prices. Management continues to see lean channel inventories, a book-to-bill above one and no indications of an abnormal inventory build or material deterioration in end demand. September mobile revenue is expected to grow in the high teens sequentially, with Apple (covered by Erik Woodring) growing meaningfully faster than the overall mobile business during the seasonal launch ramp. Apple trends have improved versus the initial outlook, with the anticipated content related decline narrowing from 20-25% to the low teens, driven by better unit volumes and mix. Longer term, we continue to watch price inflation impacts. Apple and the premium tier may have greater price elasticity, but it will take time for a new cycle of price hikes to take effect. At this time Skyworks continues to broadly expect a seasonal 2H, with content flat on a blended basis consistent with prior guidance.

Broad markets are holding steady, with strong growth in automotive and data center offset by softness in consumer-exposed IoT products. Data center remains the fastest-growing area, tracking above 50% year over year on demand for timing, high-speed connectivity and power-isolation solutions, with growth currently constrained by supply.

Higher input costs remain the main near-term gross-margin headwind.

September gross margin is guided to 44%-45% versus approximately 45% in June, reflecting a higher mobile mix and cost inflation from gold, freight, expedite fees and tighter manufacturing capacity. The pressure is more pronounced in mobile, where pricing is fixed during the product cycle, limiting Skyworks' ability to offset rising costs and absorbing normal seasonal efficiency gains. Longer term, a richer mix of higher-margin broad-markets revenue, Qorvo's now above-50% gross margin and at least $500 million of expected synergies support Skyworks' 50%-55% gross-margin target for the combined company.

Confidence in an earlier Qorvo close has increased, while Skyworks is eliminating its dividend and increasingly planning around the combined company in FY27.

The Chinese regulatory review has advanced to Phase III with SAMR, which management described as the final stage of the process, and the company is working constructively with the two remaining jurisdictions. Skyworks is now optimistic that the transaction can close during calendar 2026 and is preparing for a potential close before the end of its fiscal year.

In preparation, Skyworks expects to raise approximately $2 billion of debt in the near term and announced a significant change to its capital allocation framework.

The decision to eliminate the dividend will cause some short term selling pressure. The combined entity will have a significantly larger share count, which would raise the dividend price tag, in addition to the debt raise to fund the deal. It's doable if the company wants to orient the capital structure of the company to maintain it, but our sense is there is a clear preference to use the cash to buy back stock or for inorganic growth – with some frustration that the share price underappreciates the current deal and the high yield. That said, historical instances of dividend suspensions for stocks with material yields have seen material dislocation.

September quarter guide: Revenue was guided to $1035mn (up 11% q/q and down 6% y/y), ahead of the Street at $1026mn and our estimate of $1013mn. Gross margin was 44.5%, in-line with the Street and our estimate. EPS guide of $1.27, slightly below consensus and MSe of $1.29 and $1.30, respectively. Mobile was guided to grow high teens q/q, in-line with MSe at 16%. Broad Markets guided slightly up q/q, also in-line with MSe at 1%.

Changes to our estimates: For FY26 we are now modeling $3.9bn/45.3%/$5.04 vs. $3.9bn/45.6%/$5.04 prior. For FY27 we are now modeling $4.0bn/45.7%/$5.11 from $4.1bn/46.4%/$5.38.

Thoughts on the stock: Skyworks has executed well despite Apple related content headwinds, and the company's continued solid performance is encouraging. The smartphone environment appears to be holding up, but we are still somewhat cautious given the severity of the memory shortage - the smartphone market seems like one of the worst demand drivers in semis now.

That said, the stock seems too inexpensive to ignore, post accretion, especially if the stock remains weak on the dividend suspension. We can certainly see the view that there are better uses of cash than to support a dividend that only results in a high single digit multiple. We see value here for patient investors, but the business pressures keep us EW.

In terms of our PT, our CY27 earnings estimate declines modestly due to a more conservative gross-margin outlook. Applying the same 13.5x multiple to our revised EPS estimate of $5.31 results in a new price target of $72.

Risk Reward – Skyworks Solutions Inc (SWKS.O)

Content growth opportunities long term, but EW on customer concentration

PRICE TARGET $72.00

With the deal synergies, we believe that combined CY27 EPS would be about $7, vs. our standalone $5.31, so this would be about ~13x the combined entity. Given some deal risk and synergy uncertainties, we would prefer to value on standalone EPS with a 13.5x multiple.

EQUAL-WEIGHT THESIS

■ SWKS announced an acquisition of RF Peer QRVO, expected to close in CY27. The deal is expected to be accretive and help strengthen mobile technologies and expand scale.

■ We like the long term growth story at Skyworks, encouraged by Wi-Fi 7 IoT upgrade cycles and emerging auto business. Near term the company is seeing share loss with its top customer Apple, and we think it will also be important to broaden its exposure. The broad markets business is seeing a recovery from inventory imbalance and reduced end demand

■ We see valuation upside if the broad markets business were to make up a larger proportion of the business, or if the company's mobile business is able to capture demand in China.

Consensus Rating Distribution

BULL CASE

$105.00

16X CY27 Non-GAAP EPS of $6.58

The SWKS/QRVO acquisition occurs. Revenue growth comes in above our expectations as a broader smartphone recovery leads to greater $ content and smartphone unit growth. Gross margins improve towards SWKS' target model, WiFi 7/8 upgrades benefit Broad Markets, and cash returns to shareholders boost the multiple.

BASE CASE

$72.00

13x CY27 EPS of $5.31

Skyworks posts 8% decline in CY26 and 2.1% revenue growth in CY27. Broad markets outgrows corporate avg and Apple content flat.

BEAR CASE

8X CY27 Non-GAAP EPS of $5.34

The acquisition deal is canceled. Skyworks loses significant share at Apple, and the company fails to diversify. The stock's valuation multiple de-rates further.

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan

Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.
