We publish our Q3 QTD scanner update (period ending July 11), with comparisons against both Q2 and Q1. Beverages show signs of slowing down but remain resilient, with category growth of +3.3% in Q3 QTD, compared with +4.0% in Q2 and +6.0% in Q1.

Among our coverage names, Coca-Cola delivered +5.2% sales growth in Q3 QTD (vs. +4.2% in Q2), driven by +3.0% volume growth and continued market share gains. Soft drinks remained the primary growth driver (+7.4%), while Fairlife continued to post strong growth (+24.2%) and gained 2.7 pts of category share.

PepsiCo reported a 1.1% sales decline in Q3 QTD (vs. +0.1% growth in Q2). Beverage sales declined 0.7%, reflecting mixed performance across categories, while Foods declined 1.5%. Energy beverages remained positive at +6.9%, while soft drinks and sports drinks were modestly below prior-year levels.

Within energy drinks, performance continued to vary across brands. Monster delivered +8.4% growth in Q3 QTD, supported by +13.6% growth in the core Monster brand. Celsius grew +7.7%, driven by continued strength from Alani (+42.4%), which was partially offset by weaker performance from the legacy Celsius brand (-8.7%).

INVESTMENT IMPLICATIONS

We rate Celsius Holdings Outperform, with a PT of $44. Celsius owns the most promising brand in Energy Drinks (Alani Nu), and concerns about share trends are overdone. History and our forecast show that the portfolio can sustain share in the US, as long as Alani continues to win share. We believe this will happen because of its outstanding repurchase rates and headroom on brand awareness, informed by our consumer survey results. In addition, we believe margin expansion potential is unappreciated, as sustained top line growth will drive SG&A leverage.

We forecast 17% and 27% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively, making us bullish vs. consensus on NTM+1 EPS by ~5.0%, driven by higher expectations on sales growth and margin. We apply a 20.0x target multiple to derive our target price.

We rate Keurig Dr. Pepper Outperform, with a PT of $39. KDP has an outstanding Functional Beverages portfolio, comprised of hot brands in Energy and Hydration. While the company is in the middle of a challenging integration rife with risk, we believe the risks are well-understood and priced in. The stock continues to react constructively to fundamental business results, as we saw in Q1 of 2026. As such, we believe Beverages will continue to outperform and continue to drive appreciation.

We forecast 18% and 9% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively, leaving us in line vs. consensus on NTM+1 EPS. We apply a target multiple of 15x to arrive at our target price.

We rate Coca-Cola Market-Perform, with a PT of $83. Coke is a high-quality compounder, with an honorable mention in Functional Beverages (Protein, Hydration). With demand for zero-calorie cola accelerating and the undisputed winning brand in the category, their CSD base is also poised to accelerate globally. While we are bullish on their North America business, we are bearish vs. consensus in Latin America due to our expected impact of the 2026 excise tax in Mexico, which will dampen consumption and price realization.

We forecast 5% and 5% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively, making us bearish vs. consensus on NTM+1 EPS by ~3%. We apply a target multiple of 24.0x to arrive at our target price.

We rate PepsiCo Market-Perform, with a PT of $134. Due to their Snacks business, PEP has the most challenged Category Health in our coverage, and the company is losing share. While Beverages is a more attractive category, share losses across subcategories have also challenged organic momentum here. These weaknesses in their NA business are offset by a healthy and productive International business, which we believe is well understood.

We forecast 2% and 2% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively. We apply a 15.4x target multiple to arrive at our price target.

We rate Monster Market-Perform, with a PT of $95. Monster has the best International business in Energy Drinks, powered and protected by Coca-Cola's distribution network. We believe that US category drivers are Global, and that Energy will continue to grow rapidly in International markets. Coca-Cola's unrivaled distribution network will position Monster uniquely well to continue to gain share in these markets. A solid Brand portfolio to sustain share in the growing US market will also help.

We forecast 12% and 14% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively, making us bullish vs. consensus on NTM+1 EPS by ~3%, driven by higher expectations on sales growth and margin. We apply a 35.4x target multiple to derive our target price.
