- Flows into mutual funds and related investment products were positive across both equities and fixed income.
- Net flows into global equity funds remained positive in the week ending May 13 (+$20bn vs +$2bn in the previous week). DM equity funds led the net inflows, with US and Japan equity funds seeing strong demand. Within EM, global EM benchmark funds, Mainland China, and Korea equity funds saw net outflows; Mainland China funds have seen the largest net outflows in recent weeks. At the sector level, consumer goods funds saw the largest net outflows. Technology and infrastructure sector funds saw the largest net inflows across sectors. Energy funds saw outflows after strong inflows in the previous week (-$0.5bn vs +$4bn in the previous week) and flows have broadly tracked moves in the S&P GSCI (see chart of the week).
- Flows into global fixed income funds were well supported from inflows into agg-type and government bond funds. Short-duration bond funds have also seen sustained inflows, while long-duration bond funds have lagged. Demand for inflation-protected bond funds has been strong, consistent with a backdrop of rising inflation risks. In EM, both hard-currency and local-currency bond funds saw net inflows. Money market fund assets rose by $6bn.
- Cross-border FX flows were broadly positive, indicating supported risk sentiment. Foreign flows were positive across regions, with DM markets seeing particularly strong net inflows.
