

June quarter preview: more resilient earnings

Robust AI cloud, weak e-commerce; maintain Buy

Stronger cloud offset weaker ecommerce business

As noted in our 24 June report, we expect BABA's June quarter results to be a mixed bag – the company is likely to report weak China ecommerce CMR (customer management revenue), down 8% y-y or up slightly by 1% y-y on a like-for-like basis. However, its China Cloud revenue likely grew 45% y-y, by our estimate, much higher than the Street expectation of 37.5%. We estimate that the ARR (annualized recurring revenue) from its MaaS (Model-as-a-Service) likely surpassed the guidance of CNY10bn, reaching CNY12bn as of the end of the June quarter. We believe BABA's cloud revenue will accelerate further over the next few quarters, while margins for AliCloud should improve further from the current level of 11-12%, driven by price hikes taken earlier this year and the increased revenue share for BABA's higher-margin MaaS business. We think BABA's strength in China's AI cloud industry lies in its all-stack capability with strong position in all the critical fields of the AI value chain, spanning AI chips (T-head), IT infrastructure (operating the largest public cloud platform), LLM platform (Bailian) and, importantly, the advanced proprietary Qwen foundation model. Please see Figs 1-3 for our detailed forecasts for BABA's June quarter results.

Resilient earnings despite macro headwinds; maintain Buy

In the June quarter, BABA's efforts to steady its earnings despite the weak ecommerce business and continued AI investment should be viewed positively by the market. We estimate that its China ecommerce EBITA (excluding quick commerce [QC]) likely declined by just 3% y-y to CNY48bn despite an 8% drop in CMR, while the loss of QC likely narrowed significantly to CNY10.3bn (vs. a loss of CNY18bn one quarter earlier) compared with the market expectation for a CNY12-13bn loss. Its international commerce, AIDC, likely swung into a profit with EBITA of CNY658mn, from a slight loss a year ago. We estimate the overall ecommerce segment (including China and overseas ecommerce) will report stable (y-y) EBITA of CNY38bn in the June quarter, above the Bloomberg consensus estimate of CNY36bn. The loss for BABA's "all others" segment likely came in at CNY15.8bn, narrowing from the loss of CNY21bn in the prior quarter. We estimate BABA's consolidated EBITA rebounded strongly by 78% y-y in 2HCY26F on an aligned basis for the QC investment and disciplined investment in non-AI initiatives. We maintain our Buy rating and TP of USD178. Our top picks in the China internet space are Alibaba, Tencent (700 HK, Buy), Meituan (3690 HK, Buy), NetEase (NTES US, Buy) and J&T (1519 HK, Buy).

Company profile

Alibaba operates China's largest ecommerce platform (Taobao and Tmall). Alibaba is also the largest cloud service provider in China. Aside from ecommerce and cloud businesses, the company also provides digital media services (e.g. Youku), digital map service (Amap), among others.

Valuation Methodology

We value Alibaba's China Ecommerce Group at USD89bn, based on 5x FY27F P/E; its AliCloud business at USD270bn, based on 7x FY28F P/S; and its net valuation of non-core assets (including international ecommerce business) at USD40bn. The resulting TP is USD178. The benchmark index for this stock is Nasdaq Composite.

Risks that may impede the achievement of the target price

Downside risks include: margin downside due to ramp-up in investments; regulatory risks related to the payment and internet finance industry, which could hurt Alibaba's main business and its value in Ant Group.

ESG

Alibaba's business is environment-friendly as it does not cause pollution or generate greenhouse gas directly. Its ecommerce business may indirectly lead to an increase in paper waste from packaging materials used for parcels. Alibaba maintains good corporate governance practices, including easy access for investors and proper disclosures.

The AI cloud business remains underappreciated by the market, in our view

AliCloud likely maintained strong momentum during the quarter. We estimate that the segment's revenue grew 45% y-y in the June quarter, 5.4% above the Bloomberg consensus estimate of 37.5% y-y growth, with its EBITA margin improving to 11% from 8.8% a year ago.

BABA has accelerated the launch of flagship large language models (LLMs) with an elevated focus on agentic abilities. Competition in the Chinese LLM market remains intense, but we believe BABA is positioned to be a long-term leader, backed by its full-stack capabilities and strong footing across all critical fields of the AI value chain (AI chips, AI infrastructure, applications, and LLMs). While e-commerce growth is slowing, AliCloud's profit growth is accelerating and is poised to gradually overtake e-commerce as the primary long-term earnings driver, in our view. Trading at a 12x CY27F (i.e., also FY28F) P/E, BABA's significant potential in both cloud computing and AI is currently being underappreciated by the market, in our view.
