1Q26 Switching Trends: AI switching drives strength; Campus steadily improving

Industry Overview

DC leading overall switch growth; Strong Campus growth

The switching market is showing no signs of slowdown. The overall market grew 36.1% YoY, with data center (DC) switching up 50% YoY, broken out by AI back-end switching up 121% YoY and front-end switching growing 26% YoY. Growth continues to be driven by Tier-1 and Tier-2 Cloud providers driving elevated investments in both AI and non-AI infrastructure, with Capex across the top five hyperscalers expected to grow 85% YoY in 2026, above 2025's 72% growth. In 1Q, the top 4 hyperscalers accounted for 41% of the DC switching market and grew 90.4% YoY. Just to put this in perspective, the very same segment grew only 1.6% in 1Q24. Campus switching also shows strong momentum, up 15.1% YoY, an important distinction for Cisco who holds 53.5% share of this segment.

Both back-end and front-end switching leading DC growth

Data Center switching is the largest segment, accounting for 66% of the total switching market. This segment was up 50% in 1Q, driven by 90% growth from hyperscalers, 51% growth in Tier-2 and NeoClouds, and 16% growth in the Enterprise segment. We divide the market into two main segments: AI back-end accounts for ~38% of the DC switching market, where AI DC buildouts drove 121% YoY growth, as well as Front-end switching, that also grew nicely, accelerating to 25.6% YoY growth from 11.8% last year. At the aggregate level, Arista leads the DC switching market, growing share from 19.6% to 21.1% QoQ, followed by Cisco that grew share from 16.6% to 17.8% sequentially and Celestica who also grew share from 13.2% to 14.7% in the same period.

Back-end growth driven by Data Center buildouts

AI back-end DC switching was up 121% YoY, accounting for 38% of total DC demand versus 26% a year ago. We recognize that the growth is cyclical, but the data does not show any evidence of growth slowdown. The most interesting trend was Cisco's share gain, increasing from zero last year to 7.9% in 1Q26, mostly attributed to its growing position with hyperscalers. Cisco's share at Hyperscaler back-end switching grew from nil in 1Q25 to 13.2% in 1Q26, matching now Arista's 13.2% and NVidia's 13%, which we attribute mostly to Cisco's penetration to Meta's 800G leaf switch layer. Celestica remains the largest player in back-end switching, holding 26.3% share, followed by Nvidia's 24.5% and Arista's 12.1%. Lastly, we highlight Arista's growing share in the Neocloud and Tier-2 Cloud market, with its share growing from 2% in 1Q24 to 11.1% in 1Q25 and now at 19.1% in 1Q26.

Front-end remains steady, supported by Cloud/Enterprise

Back-end investments also drive front-end demand, with this segment accelerating to 26% YoY growth in 1Q26 from 11.8% in 1Q25. We highlight three key trends: First, Hyperscalers (32% of total) continue to invest in Front-end switching networks, up 51% YoY vs. 25.2% growth in 1Q25. Enterprise growth (42% of total) is also solid at 13.4%, although somewhat down from last year's growth. Second, Cisco and Arista lead the Front-end market, at 23.8% and 26.5%, fluctuating around the same levels in the last few quarters. Lastly, Arista's implied guidance for Front-end switching calls for no growth in 2026, while in reality, this segment grew 19.1% YoY in 1Q26, suggesting upside to its implied growth guidance. Analysis of Campus Switching on Page 3.

Campus growth improving on refresh opportunity

Campus switching accounts for 34% of total switching and was up 15.1% YoY in 1Q26. We believe the underlying growth is about 10-11%, with the reported 15% growth somewhat bolstered by reconciliation done by market research company Dell'Oro. Regardless, we highlight a few key trends: a) the market is consistently growing at 9%+ vs. historical levels of 1-2%, driven by product introduction and refreshes. b) Market shares fluctuate from quarter to quarter, but remain relatively stable. Cisco leads the market with 53% share, HPE at 12% and Arista at 3%. c) Lastly, Cisco's share should increase in the next few quarters, driven by the end-of-service (EOS) of its Catalyst 4000 series in 2026 and the Catalyst 6000 series reaching EOS at year-end 2027.
