

EUROPE WEEKLY KICKSTART

1Q26 Earnings Tracker: Late season update

The bulk of the season is behind us. As of today, more than 280 companies included in our Tracker have reported earnings, representing roughly 75% of the total market cap due to report in 1Q26 season.

Earnings beats remain positive but concentrated. So far in the season, EPS has surprised by around 2.3% on a cap-weighted basis, only slightly below the historical average (Exhibit 1). Financials and Commodities, whose companies tend to report quarterly to a greater extent than the rest of the market, are continuing to lead the positive surprises. At the margin, and despite lower Middle East sales given the Iran conflict, Consumer companies are also contributing to aggregate earnings beats. Among those under our Equity research coverage, Puma and Adidas reported earnings ahead of expectations, with their share prices up 5% and 8% on reporting day, respectively. In the retail space, our sector analysts have also highlighted better than expected US margins for Ahold Delhaize and adj. EBIT for Zalando.

EU Big Oils are experiencing a strong 1Q26 season with sector Operating Cash Flow beating expectations by 9%, offsetting the higher-than-expected capex and driving solid FCF delivery. Our Equity analysts expect further upside for LNG trading profits and upstream earnings in Q2, and rising profits point to a major capex upcycle from 2027.

Capital goods are showing strong order momentum (on which 77% of our Equity research coverage surprised to the upside) in the 1Q26 season led by AI/datacentre demand, but our analysts note that investors have flagged concerns that pre-buy activity may have inflated order strength, as conversion of orders into sales (c. 70% missed) seems to be getting longer. Furthermore, companies that have reported earnings are showing margins under pressure (c.50% missed) from input costs.

Earnings misses continue to be penalised, while beats are only marginally rewarded. On average, companies missing expectations have underperformed the market by c.1.5% on the reporting day, whereas earnings beats have outperformed by less than 1% (Exhibit 2).

Companies providing guidance away from consensus expectations are seeing a smaller price reaction than has historically been the case, possibly because the increasing macro uncertainty is contributing to make these estimates less reliable. report in the current season, ca. 140 have also issued their 2026 guidance on at least one key financial item. Roughly half of these names provided guidance below analysts' expectations while performing in line with the market on the reporting day (Exhibit 3) (in all cases in which guidance was provided as a range, we match the range mid-point against consensus expectations). On the other hand, companies guiding above consensus have outperformed the market by less than 1% (vs. >2% during last earnings season).

Aggregate earnings upgrades continue to be sustained by commodity-related sectors. Exhibit 4 shows that Energy and Basic Resources names are guiding the aggregate 4% EPS upgrade observed since the outbreak of the Iran war. Chemicals producers, which are proving able to pass higher costs through to downstream buyers, have also experienced positive earnings revisions since the start of the season (+3%, vs. +1.5% for the market). Outside of the commodities space: higher real rates, more active fiscal policy, reshoring, supply-chain reconfiguration and geopolitics all remain supportive our basket of capital-intensive stocks (GSSTCAP1), whose 2026 earnings have been revised up by 3% in the past month.
