We approach the deadline (June 30th) for the White House to decide on tariffs on refined copper. In previous notes, we expressed our TACO view of no tariffs. Trade deals were promised (Trump Directs Negotiations to Adjust Imports of Processed Critical Minerals) but haven't arrived from, say, Chile or Indonesia. In this note, we evaluate potential paths for copper prices. Bernstein Occasionally Chickens Out?

Copper prices have surged over the past year due to: (1) supply disruptions at major mines, (2) increased financial speculation (Exhibit 1), (3) additional demand from US inventory stockpiling, as traders anticipate a 15% tariff on refined copper by January 2027, and potentially 30% by January 2028 (Exhibit 2 to Exhibit 3).

The potential tariff stems from the Trump's desire to achieve "resource independence" by ensuring sufficient domestic refining capacity and the market for refined copper in the US (Exhibit 5).

Our base case scenario assumes a definitive announcement that refined copper will not be subject to tariffs. Inventories from US warehouses might flow back to RoW if LME prices are sufficiently higher than Comex prices. Otherwise, US inventory levels will normalize as stocks are drawn to meet domestic US demand. In this scenario, we foresee gradual decline in copper prices to reach $11,000/t due to incremental supply released from Comex warehouse.

Bull case scenario could unfold through three pathways, listed in order of increasing bullishness for copper prices: (1) extended review period (i.e., decision will be made in the future), (2) Trump introduces 15% tariff, with no firm guidance on potential tariff increases in 2028, (3) Trump announces both 15% tariff starting January 2027 and 30% tariff starting January 2028.

We estimate that the cost to finance and move copper from Western Europe to the US is about $400/t to $754/t depending on storage duration (Exhibit 7). Potential upside if Trump introduces 15% tariff is >$2,000/t. This skewed risk/reward ratio creates incentives for traders to keep piling copper in Comex warehouses. Hence, in all bull case scenario, we are likely to see 10kt per week incremental US copper inventories, which accumulates to 250-300kt for a 6-mo period (bull case no. 1), and as much as 700-800kt for a 1.5 year period (bull case no. 3).

Assuming stable macro environment, copper prices might reclaim its all-time-high level in bull case scenario, even without mine supply failure.

Across our coverage, copper price sensitivity (Exhibit 18 to Exhibit 21) is most pronounced for FCX and ANTO (c.1.5x and 1.4x beta to copper, respectively). This is followed by AAL (c.1.1x), with BHP exhibiting a more moderate sensitivity (c.0.7x).

HOW DO WE GET HERE? - A BRIEF RECAP

Copper rose significantly last year from $8,691/t in January 2025 to reach $12,598/t on 30 December 2025. It ran further north this year and hit an all-time-high $14,109/t in mid-May. Several factors have contributed to this sharp rise:

1. Supply disruptions at major copper mines, such as at Kamo-a-Kakula and Grasberg (e.g., FCX announcement that production from Grasberg would be negatively impacted by mud-rush incident pushed copper prices past $10,000/t in September).
2. Increased financial speculation, with net futures positioning currently at elevated levels. We believe this helped fuel copper's rise from $11,000/t to $13,000/t in December.

EXHIBIT 1: Net COT positioning had climbed significantly in late Q4 2025, helping copper price to reach $13,000/t in December.

Source: Bloomberg, Bernstein analysis

3. Additional demand from inventory stockpiling (i.e., channel stuffing) in the US, as traders anticipate a 15% tariff on refined copper by January 2027, and 30% by January 2028. Overall, we saw copper exchange inventory rose by 267kt in 2025, with the rise in Comex 344kt. Year-to-date 2026, copper inventory in LME, SHFE and Comex has increased by 224kt, 58kt and 152kt, respectively, making total exchange inventory to rise by 434kt.

4. The last stretch to $14,100/t was partly due to improved risk sentiment as major stock indexes hit their all-time-high levels (Exhibit 4). Widening spread between LME and Comex also helps to maintain positive sentiment in the copper market (Exhibit 10).

WHERE ARE WE GOING NEXT? - TARIFFS RISKS

The additional demand from US inventory stockpiling is still ongoing. The origin of this phenomenon is the desire of the Trump's administration to achieve "resource independence" by ensuring sufficient domestic refining capacity and the market for refined copper in the US (Exhibit 5). Instead of US government stockpiling copper, Trump let traders do the job by introducing potential 15% tariffs starting on January 2027. The deadline for tariffs policy announcement is coming in less than 3 weeks.

EXHIBIT 5: We'll get more clarity on section 232 investigations results by June 2026 with a potential of 15% tariffs starting in January 2027 and 30% tariffs starting in January 2028.

(7) The Secretary shall continue to monitor imports of copper and its derivatives. The Secretary shall, from time to time, in consultation with any senior executive branch officials the Secretary deems appropriate, review the status of copper and copper derivative imports with respect to national security. The Secretary shall inform the President of any circumstances that, in the Secretary's opinion, might indicate the need for further action by the President under section 232. By June 30, 2026, the Secretary shall provide the President with an update on domestic copper markets, including refining capacity and the market for refined copper in the United States, so that the President may determine whether imposing a phased universal import duty on refined copper of 15 percent starting on January 1, 2027, and 30 percent starting on January 1, 2028, as recommended by the June 30, 2025, report, is warranted to ensure that copper imports do not continue to threaten to impair the national security. The Secretary shall also inform the President of any circumstance that, in the Secretary's opinion, might indicate that the duty rate provided for in this proclamation, or any actions modifying this proclamation, is no longer necessary.

Adjusting Imports of Copper into the United States – The White House

Source: White House, Bernstein analysis

Since last summer, we have maintained our view that Trump is unlikely to impose tariffs on refined copper. Our full thesis is set out in Global Metals & Mining: Copper Taco, Part Deux - US policy is distorting copper price and Quick Take: Don't reach for the copper taco.

To date, there have been no observable copper agreements between the US and Chile - an outcome we had expected as a logical step to secure supply for the domestic market.

Looking ahead, we see two primary scenarios:

- Base case (no tariffs): A definitive announcement confirms that refined copper will not be subject to tariffs.
- Bull case: This could unfold through three pathways, listed in order of increasing bullishness for copper prices:
 1. Extended review period: A delay in the decision effectively prolongs uncertainty.
 2. Moderate tariff framework: A 15% tariff is introduced from January 2027, with no firm guidance on potential increases in 2028.
 3. Escalating tariff structure: A 15% tariff in 2027 followed by a 30% tariff in 2028.

We outline the implications of each scenario below.

EXHIBIT 6: US copper tariffs scenario and their implications to copper prices

Scenario		Implication to Copper Flow	Implication to Copper Prices	Potential Incremental Inventories to US (kt)	Note
15% tariffs from Jan 2027	30% tariffs from Jan 2028

		Inventories continue flowing into the US until the new decision deadline	+	250kt to 300kt (assuming January 2027 deadline)	Copper prices continue to rise in H2 2026 as traders continue to weigh the potential of 15% tariffs in 2027

NO TARIFFS ON REFINED COPPER - OUR BASE CASE

A key driver of the ~500kt build in Comex inventories since last year has been trader positioning ahead of a potential >$2,000/t windfall (15% x $14,000/t price assumption) under a 15% tariff scenario.

Without tariffs, the economic rationale for holding excess copper in the US weakens materially. Inventories would likely be gradually released either into the domestic market or redirected to ex-US buyers. In practice, a relatively oversupplied US market could see the LME move to a premium over Comex, incentivising flows back to international fabricators. In both cases, the release of excess US inventories would add incremental supply to the market and exert downward pressure on prices.

15% TARIFFS FROM JANUARY 2027

Traders are incentivised to redirect all available non-contracted copper to the US, given the prospect of crystallising ~15% returns within six months with limited financial risk.

Current arbitrage economics remain compelling. The West European Grade A premium stands at $168/t (May 2026), with freight to the US at ~$100/t. Once landed in the US, storage and handling costs in a CME warehouse range from ~$95/t (1-month) to ~$175/t (6-month) (Exhibit 8). Financing, assumed at ~4.75% p.a. (SOFR + 100bps), adds c.$320/t over six months at a $13,500/t copper price.

In aggregate, this implies a total carry cost of ~$754/t for a six-month arbitrage trade - well below the implied tariff-driven upside, which is expected to be higher than $2,000/t (Exhibit 7).

EXHIBIT 7: All-in costs (above LME-benchmark) to deliver European cathode into CME warehouses are ~$400/t for 1-month and ~$754/t for 6-month trades, versus >$2,000/t upside under a tariff scenario.

CME Futures - LME Spot Copper Arbitrage ($/t)

Assuming we see 10ktpa inflow into the US per week - which was the average inventory addition rate in the past year - we would tie up additional 250kt to 300kt copper in inventory in 2H 2026 alone.

CME warehouse capacity is unlikely to be an immediate constraint. Total registered US capacity is ~1Mt, with over half concentrated in Louisiana, where the New Orleans hub is reportedly approaching utilization limits.

However, capacity is expanding at the margin. Kodiak Warehouse LLC applied in February to register copper deliverable against Comex futures in Lemont, Illinois, and was included in the CME system by May - implying a relatively short ~3-month onboarding timeline.

As such, warehouse availability is unlikely to materially constrain further arbitrage flows.

EXHIBIT 11: Space availability in CME copper warehouse is unlikely to be the limiting factor for further arbitrage trading

Source: CME, Bernstein analysis

Could CME price converge with LME after tariffs announcement?

Intuitively, copper pricing is set by the marginal unit of supply. For the US, that marginal unit is imported copper.

The US remains structurally short, relying on imports for c.50% of its copper consumption (Exhibit 12). This dependence is critical in framing the pricing dislocation risk between COMEX and LME.

As of 10 June 2026, visible inventories stand at ~600kt on Comex and ~122kt on the LME, which is about ~80% of US annual import in 2024 (i.e., the last “normal” year).

Exhibit 13 highlights that off-exchange inventories in the US are negligible. These were ~30kt in Q1 2025 and declined sharply to ~8kt by September 2025. We expect current levels to remain within this range.

Combining exchange and non-exchange inventories, total refined copper availability remains insufficient to fully cover annual import needs. In other words, the system still depends on a continued inflow of imported metal to clear demand.

Under a 15% tariff regime, the economics for imports require Comex prices to be higher than LME prices. To incentivise flows into the US, imported copper must price at a minimum of LME + tariff (~15%) + logistics costs (Exhibit 7). Anything below that threshold fails to attract marginal supply.

Hence, convergence of LME and Comex prices is therefore unlikely because the tariff structurally embeds a wedge between the two benchmarks, with COMEX needing to remain elevated to incentivise imports and balance domestic demand.

EXHIBIT 13: Refined stocks/inventories outside exchanges make up a small portion of total inventories. There's an interesting trend in Q3 2025 when non-exchange inventories tightened considerably.

POSTPONING TARIFFS DECISION

In this scenario, White House extends the deadline for the US secretary of commerce to provide update on the US copper market. This would introduce another period of uncertainty on tariffs. Incentivized by potential upside from tariffs, traders might continue to send copper inventories into Comex warehouses.

Assuming the decision will be postponed until January 2027, and traders send 10kt per week into Comex warehouses, we'd tie up another 250kt-300kt of copper in 2H 2026. Absent any major negative macro events, this should be sufficient to propel copper to $14,000/t level.

EXHIBIT 15: We have less than 3 weeks before the deadline for US secretary of commerce to provide update on US copper markets, which will determine whether there will be tariffs on refined copper.

CONCLUSION

If our base case holds - Trump does not proceed with a 15% tariff on refined copper - then the near-term balance points to incremental supply emerging from Comex inventories. These tonnes are unlikely to leave the US outright unless a clear arb opens, with LME prices meaningfully above Comex prices.

However, even without significant physical outflows, a softer US import requirement would incrementally loosen the global balance, exerting a gradual downward pressure on prices, with the market gravitating toward the ~$11,000/t level.

If we are wrong - either because Trump delays the decision or proceeds with a 15% tariff - the near-term response is likely to be continuous inflows into the US. This could tie up roughly 250-300kt of inventories just in 2H 2026.

Moreover, if market participants anticipate a potential escalation in tariffs (e.g., to 30% by 2028), the incentive to pre-position metal would likely extend into 2027, lifting cumulative inventory absorption to as much as 700 to 800kt. This is comparable to removing a full year of output from a major mine like Grasberg.

The implication is a materially tighter ex-US balance, which would translate to a renewed price leg higher. Under this scenario, copper is likely to retest and exceed prior highs, with prices sustaining ~$14,000/t over the foreseeable future.

EQUITY SENSITIVITY ANALYSIS

Across our coverage, copper price sensitivity is most pronounced for FCX and ANTO (c. 1.5x and 1.4x beta to copper, respectively). This is followed by AAL (c. 1.1x), with BHP shows a more moderate sensitivity (c. 0.7x). Other names like RIO, GLEN, BOL and VALE would be impacted to a lesser degree. Meanwhile, ABX and NEM are expected to see only minimal impact.

Upside risks to our price target on Antofagasta PLC include (1) copper, gold prices performing better than expected.

Downside risks to our price target on Antofagasta PLC include (1) copper prices performing worse than expected, (2) production growing slower than expected due to challenges in Centinela second concentrator project, and (3) Centinela project capex is higher than expected

Freeport-McMoRan Inc

Upside risks to our price target on Freeport-McMoRan Inc include (1) better than expected Americas leaching initiatives, (2) better than expected copper and gold prices

Downside risks to our price target on Freeport-McMoRan Inc include (1) Grasberg repair cost is higher than expected, (2) IUPK extension in Indonesia is delayed further

RATINGS DEFINITIONS, BENCHMARKS AND DISTRIBUTION

EQUITY RATINGS DEFINITIONS

Bernstein brand

The Bernstein brand rates stocks based on forecasts of relative performance for the next 12 months versus the S&P 500 for stocks listed on the U.S. and Canadian exchanges, versus the Bloomberg Europe Developed Markets Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index EUR (EDME) for stocks listed on the European exchanges and emerging markets exchanges outside of the Asia Pacific region, versus the Bloomberg Japan Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index USD (JPL) for stocks listed on the Japanese exchanges, and versus the Bloomberg Asia ex-Japan Large and Mid Cap Price Return Index (ASIA) for stocks listed on the Asian (ex-Japan) exchanges -unless otherwise specified.

The Bernstein brand has three categories of ratings:

- Outperform: Stock will outpace the market index by more than 15 pp
- Market-Perform: Stock will perform in line with the market index to within +/- 15 pp
- Underperform: Stock will trail the performance of the market index by more than 15 pp

Coverage Suspended: Coverage of a company under the Bernstein research brand has been suspended. Ratings and price targets are suspended temporarily, are no longer current, and should therefore not be relied upon.

Not Rated: A rating assigned when the stock cannot be accurately valued, or the performance of the company accurately predicted, at the present time. The covering analyst may continue to publish research reports on the company to update investors on events and developments.

Not Covered (NC) denotes companies that are not under coverage.

Bernstein brand stock ratings are based on a 12-month time horizon.

Autonomous brand – common stocks

The Autonomous brand rates common stocks as indicated below. As our benchmarks we use the Bloomberg Europe 500 Banks And Financial Services Index (BEBANKS) and Bloomberg Europe Dev Mkt Financials Large and Mid Cap Price Ret Index EUR (EDMFI) index for developed European banks and Payments, the Bloomberg Europe 500 Insurance Index (BEINSUR) for European insurers, the S&P 500 and S&P Financials for US banks and Payments coverage, S5LIFE for US Insurance, the S&P Insurance Select Industry (SPSIINS) for US Non-Life Insurers coverage, and the Bloomberg Emerging Markets Financials Large, Mid and Small Cap Price Return Index (EMLSF) for emerging market banks and insurers and Payments. Ratings are stated relative to the sector (not the market).

The Autonomous brand has three categories of common stock ratings:

- Outperform (OP): Stock will outpace the relevant index by more than 10 pp
- Neutral (N): Stock will perform in line with the market index to within +/- 10 pp
- Underperform (UP): Stock will trail the performance of the relevant index by more than 10 pp

Coverage Suspended: Coverage of a company under the Autonomous research brand has been suspended. Ratings and price targets are suspended temporarily, are no longer current, and should therefore not be relied upon.

Not Rated: A rating assigned when the stock cannot be accurately valued, or the performance of the company accurately predicted, at the present time. The covering analyst may continue to publish research reports on the company to update investors on events and developments.

Those denoted as 'Feature' (e.g., Feature Outperform FOP, Feature Under Outperform FUP) are our core ideas.

Not Covered (NC) denotes companies that are not under coverage.

Autonomous brand common stock ratings are based on a 12-month time horizon.

Autonomous brand – preferred stocks

The Autonomous brand has three categories of preferred stock ratings:

- Outperform (OP): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to outperform preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.
- Neutral (N): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to perform in line with preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.
- Underperform (UP): The total return of the preferred instrument is expected to underperform preferred securities of other issuers operating in similar sectors or rating categories over the next six months.

Autonomous preferred stock ratings are based on a 6-month time horizon.

AUTONOMOUS CREDIT RESEARCH

Where this report contains investment recommendations for credit instruments, as defined in article 3(1)(35) of the Market Abuse Regulation, the information below is presented to comply with its disclosure requirements.
