Global Luxury Goods—Card Insights

US Luxury Credit Card data – Resilient in May, 2Y spend turns positive

CITI'S TAKE

Total Luxury Brands' credit card spend rose 3% YoY in May, a fifth consecutive month of growth, albeit moderating slightly from +4% in April amid continued geopolitical and macro uncertainty. This was achieved against a ~5ppt tougher comparative, with 2Y-stacked spend turning positive to +2% from -3%. The YoY deceleration was driven by slightly softer albeit robust transaction values (ASP), up mid-teens, and broadly unchanged transacting-customer trends (volumes), down ~10%. Inflationary pressures continued to weigh on consumer sentiment in May. The Conference Board index edged lower as weaker current business and labour conditions offset improved income expectations, while UMichigan survey softened for the third consecutive month. US consumers remain resilient, particularly at the higher-end, supported by wealth effects from equity markets and steady wage growth. That said, discretionary spending could soften if geopolitical tensions and inflationary pressures persist, particularly against a backdrop of negative real income growth and savings erosion.

General Description — Card Insights represent a selected subset of Citi's credit card transactions and are not representative of Citi's overall credit cardholder population. The data is highly aggregated, anonymized and should be considered in the context of other economic indicators and publicly available information. All cards included within Card Insights comprise a panel of more than 10 million US cardholders (Card Insights Disclaimer and Methodology).

Total Luxury Brands credit card rose 3% YoY in May, a fifth consecutive month of growth, moderating slightly from +4% in April amid continued geopolitical and macro uncertainty. This was achieved against a ~5ppt tougher comparative, with 2Y-stacked spend turning positive again to +2% from -3%. The YoY deceleration was driven by slightly softer transaction values (ASP), though still robust, up mid-teens, with transacting-customer trends (volumes) broadly unchanged, down ~10% YoY. Inflationary pressures linked to the Middle East conflict continued to weigh on consumer sentiment in May. The Conference Board index edged lower as weaker current business and labour conditions offset improved short-term income expectations. The UMichigan survey softened for the third consecutive month, with sharper declines among lower-income consumers. Overall, US consumers continue to show resilience, particularly at the higher end, supported by wealth effects from rising equity markets and steady wage growth, but eroding savings rate. The 1Q26 Luxury reporting season showed broadly stable QoQ sales growth (with the US still outperforming), on ~5ppt easier comps, implying a 2Y-stack slowdown across all regions but Asia ex-Japan. VA consensus FY26E/FY27E sales and EBIT growth have been cut by low single-digits and mid-single-digits YTD to +4%/+6% and +3%/+10% YoY, respectively. Luxury shares have again underperformed YTD (-20% vs. +6% for the European market), with valuations derating ~20% in both absolute and relative terms to ~20x FY27E P/E, a 15-20% discount to historical averages.

The most US-exposed companies are led by Tapestry, followed by Capri, Watches of Switzerland, Birkenstock, EssilorLuxottica, Cucinelli, Pandora, Ferragamo, Zegna, LVMH, Richemont, and Kering.

Least US-exposed companies, in descending order: Hugo Boss, Burberry, Swatch Group, Hermes, Prada Group, with Moncler the least exposed.

Credit Card Insights for US Luxury, Sporting Goods and Beauty Spend

Demand resilient in May (+3% YoY) as 2Y-stacked spend turns positive

The US economy was the second-best performer among developed markets in 2025, with real GDP growth of 2.2%, behind Spain at 2.9%. Australia ranked third at 1.9% annual growth. Over the same period, the Euro Area expanded by 1.6%, while Japan and the UK grew by 1.2% and 1.4%, respectively. US resilience has persisted despite compounding headwinds: elevated post-pandemic inflation, a prolonged period of restrictive interest rates, and significant trade-policy shifts under President Trump's second term. Over the past six months, the effective tariff rate has fluctuated but currently stands near 10%, up from roughly 2.5% pre-2025, according to our estimates. Following February's decision by the Supreme Court to strike down IEEPA-based tariffs, much of these levies ($166bn according to a report by Customs and Border Protection) are now expected to be refunded, posing a potential relief to European Luxury companies.

Our outlook for the global economy continues to assume near-trend growth at 2.6% for 2026E, and global headline inflation to 3.5%, reflecting the imprint of higher oil prices and accompanying supply-chain disruptions from the Middle East conflict. The global economy remains in the jaws of a severe supply shock due to the Iran war and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz. Even so, various real-time readings on economic activity point to still-solid performance. These include PMIs, "surprise" indexes, and the performance of global equity markets. The continued momentum reflects in part the accelerating strength of AI spending. But more broadly, the global economy looks to be absorbing the oil shock fairly smoothly.

US consumer sentiment ended 2025 on weak footing and has been volatile in 2026 to date, weighed down by federal government restructuring, tariff volatility, softening labour-market expectations, and renewed geopolitical stresses. Core PCE inflation has been sticky above 3%YoY while core CPI has slowed below 3%, an abnormal divergence as CPI typically runs stronger than PCE. Headline inflation will continue to be strong in the near term as energy prices have remained elevated. We do not expect much passthrough of higher energy prices to core inflation, but with upside risks to our forecasts for components like goods prices. Core PCE inflation is sticky in part to rising prices for AI-related goods like computer software and accessories. The Fed and markets remain focused on medium- and longer-term inflation expectations that have stayed anchored. We expect more benign monthly core inflation readings in the summer and fall.

The US consumer continues to spend at a slower pace than in recent years, yet aggregate consumption shows few signs of faltering. Balance sheets remain generally healthy, though pressures among lower-income households persist. These strains have been building for some time, even as this cohort has benefited in recent years from very low unemployment and a tight labour market. Monthly payroll job growth has been very volatile month-to-month but has picked-up slightly on a 6m moving average. The unemployment rate has increased gradually over the last couple of years but has stayed within a narrow range around 4.3-4.4% in the last several months. We expect labor demand to remain softer than labor supply this year, which would put further upward pressure on the unemployment rate by the summer. The labor market continues to be defined by a low hiring rate but also low layoff rate and is not a source of inflationary pressure as wage growth has slowed. By contrast, spending among higher-income households has been supported by strong wealth effects from equity and home prices. This dynamic should continue to provide support, as equity markets are thus far tracking gains seen in recent years, although the housing market appears softer, with some measures of home prices declining in recent months.

US credit card spend for Total Luxury Brands card rose 3% YoY in May, marking a fifth consecutive month of growth, although momentum moderated slightly from +4% in April amid continued geopolitical and macro uncertainty. This was achieved against a ~5ppt tougher comparative, with 2Y-stacked spend turning back positive to +2% from -3% in April.

The slight YoY deceleration was driven by softer transaction values (ASP), though still robust, up mid-teens YoY, while transacting-customer trends (volumes) were broadly unchanged, down ~10% YoY. Inflationary pressures linked to the Middle East conflict continued to weigh on consumer sentiment in May. The Conference Board index edged lower as weaker current business and labour conditions offset improvements in short-term expectations for business, labour and income. The UMichigan survey softened for the third consecutive month, with sharper declines among lower-income and non-college consumers. Overall, US consumers remain resilient, particularly at the higher-end, supported by wealth effects from rising equity markets, property gains, potential tax-cut support and steady wage growth. That said, discretionary spending could soften if geopolitical tensions and inflationary pressures persist, particularly against a backdrop of negative real income growth and eroding savings rate (2.6% as of May 2026).

Total Luxury Brands' credit card spend (Figure 1) grew +3% YoY in May vs. +4% in April, with 2-year stacked spend turning positive to +2% vs. -3%.

By product category (Figure 2):

- Watch Brands & Retailers turned positive again to +7% YoY in May from -4% in April, with 2-year stacked spend improving to +23% from +6%.
- Jewellery accelerated to +6% YoY in May vs. +1% in April, back to the YTD trend, with 2-year stacked spend improving to +16% from +3%.
- Leather Goods slowed down to +2% YoY in May from +6% in March and April, with 2-year stacked spend broadly unchanged at -7%.
- RTW softened slightly to +2% YoY in May from +3% in April, with 2-year stacked spend improving to -2% from -7%.

Considering the Total Luxury Market index (i.e., including High-End Department Stores, Online Luxury platforms, and Online Luxury Off-Price and Resale platforms), spend remained broadly stable at +1% YoY in May, with the stronger performance in Online Luxury Off-Price/Resale offsetting deteriorating trends in Online Luxury platforms, while High-End Department Stores remained stable. On a 2-year stacked basis, Total Luxury Market spend improved sequentially to -3% in May from -7% in April.

Finally, Sport brands and retailers remained broadly stable at -4% YoY in May, and Beauty improved to -3% YoY from -7%. On a 2Y-stacked basis, Sport brands and retailers remained stable at -11% in May, together with Beauty, broadly stable at -10%.

Analysis of Citi credit-card data indicates stronger resilience among upper-income demographics across 2023–2025, with transaction-value growth (a proxy for ASP) consistently outperforming transacting-customer growth (a proxy for volumes).

Steep price increases implemented during the pandemic have arguably alienated aspirational buyers—particularly in developed markets and in entry-price categories that typically target these consumers (e.g., small leather goods, small/mini leather bags, canvas bags, backpacks, sneakers, slides)—posing a long-term risk to volume growth, in our view.

After highly differentiated pricing approaches in 2023 (ranging from low single-digit to ~10% increases), pricing became more consistent in 2024, averaging +3–4%, with Hermès the main outlier at +9% in January 2024.

In 2025, most brands implemented low- to mid-single-digit price increases across regions, reflecting brand-specific strategies, input-cost pressures (precious metals, FX, general inflation), and US-focused adjustments to offset higher tariffs: the 10% tariff on EU goods (raised to 15% from 1 August 2025 under the US–EU deal) and the 31% tariff on Swiss luxury goods since 9 April 2025 (raised to 39% from 7 August before being reduced to 15% under the agreement effective 14 November 2025). In Japan, price increases in 2025 were more limited than in prior years, initially reflecting JPY strength against the CNY following the June 2024 trough. However, renewed yen weakness late last year widened the Japan–China retail price gap above historical norms, leaving Japan roughly 20–25% cheaper and continuing to support parallel-market (daigou) activity. The Japanese government plans to curb this through changes to the Tax Free Shopping scheme expected to take effect on 1 November 2026.

In 2026 to date, very low single-digit price increases have been implemented at most soft luxury brands (except for Hermès at +5–6% in January), while hard-luxury brands have raised prices a touch higher, by low- to mid-single-digit percentages, reflecting higher precious-metal costs (watches, jewellery) and CHF strength (watches). While we expect pricing to become more homogeneous across brands in the medium term, we still see multi-year catch-up opportunities at Hermès and at Richemont’s jewellery Maisons—Cartier, Van Cleef & Arpels, and Buccellati.

Appendix 1 – Regressions: Credit card data vs. US quarterly YoY sales growth for key luxury stocks

We back tested the robustness of our credit card data by running regressions with historical quarterly constant currency sales growth. We aggregate monthly credit card data to derive US quarterly spend by product category. We then multiply these datapoints to each company's last publicly available (or estimated) revenue sales mix by category (Leather Goods, RTW, Watches, Jewellery). Finally, we plot on the X-axis the constant-currency quarterly sales growth as reported by each covered company in the US and on the Y-axis the quarterly sales growth implied by Citi's credit card data.

On each regression chart in the following pages:

- The blue dots denote historical US quarterly sales growth.
- The red dot denotes the last published quarter.
- The red star denotes the implied growth for the next quarter to be reported.

While there is some degree of variability on a company-by-company basis, the aggregate credit card data displays an acceptable degree of correlation with US quarterly sales growth as reported by our covered companies (~0.75 on aggregate) and a very good fit ($R^2 > 0.8$ for most brands).

Card Insights Disclaimer and Methodology

Card Insights consists of selected data from a subset of Citi's credit card transactions and is not representative of Citi's overall credit cardholder population. The data is highly aggregated and anonymized and has undergone rigorous security protocols to keep all customer information confidential and secure. All Card Insights datasets reflect a degree of selection bias whereby general and proprietary methods are used to aggregate and classify transactions into spending categories. Card Insights data is unadjusted for the number of credit card customers and can be influenced by market share gains/losses from Citi's card business. Card-not-present transactions are those where the card information was not transmitted directly from the card at the time of transaction and is utilized as a proxy for online, telephone, or mail-order spending.

This data should not be considered as indicative or predictive of the past or future financial performance of Citi or its credit card business. Additional information about the methodology used to aggregate the data is available upon request.

Guide to Citi Research Fundamental Research Investment Ratings:

Citi Research stock recommendations include an investment rating and an optional risk rating to highlight high risk stocks.

Risk rating takes into account both price volatility and fundamental criteria. Stocks will either have no risk rating or a High risk rating assigned.

Investment Ratings: Citi Research investment ratings are Buy, Neutral and Sell. Our ratings are a function of analyst expectations of expected total return ("ETR") and risk. ETR is the sum of the forecast price appreciation (or depreciation) plus the dividend yield for a stock within the next 12 months. The target price is based on a 12 month time horizon. The Investment rating definitions are: Buy (1) ETR of 15% or more or 25% or more for High risk stocks; and Sell (3) for negative ETR. Any covered stock not assigned a Buy or a Sell is a Neutral (2). For stocks rated Neutral (2), if an analyst believes that there are insufficient valuation drivers and/or investment catalysts to derive a positive or negative investment view, they may elect with the approval of Citi Research management not to assign a target price and, thus, not derive an ETR. Citi Research may suspend its rating and target price and assign "Rating Suspended" status for regulatory and/or internal policy reasons. Citi Research may also suspend its rating and target price and assign "Under Review" status for other exceptional circumstances (e.g. lack of information critical to the analyst's thesis, trading suspension) affecting the company and/or trading in the company's securities. In both such situations, the rating and target price will show as "—" and "—" respectively in the rating history price chart. Prior to 11 April 2022 Citi Research assigned "Under Review" status to both situations and prior to 11 Nov 2020 only in exceptional circumstances. As soon as practically possible, the analyst will publish a note re-establishing a rating and investment thesis. Investment ratings are determined by the ranges described above at the time of initiation of coverage, a change in investment and/or risk rating, or a change in target price (subject to limited management discretion). At times, the expected total returns may fall outside of these ranges because of market price movements and/or other short-term volatility or trading patterns. Such interim deviations will be permitted but will become subject to review by Research Management. Your decision to buy or sell a security should be based upon your personal investment objectives and should be made only after evaluating the stock's expected performance and risk.

Catalyst Watch/Short Term Views ("STV") Ratings Disclosure:

Catalyst Watch and STV Upside/Downside calls: Citi Research may also include a Catalyst Watch or STV Upside or Downside call to indicate the analyst expects the share price to rise (fall) in absolute terms over a specified period of 30 or 90 days in reaction to one or more specific near-term catalysts or events impacting the company or the market. A Catalyst Watch will be published when Analyst confidence is high that an impact to share price will occur; it will be a STV when confidence level is moderate. A Catalyst Watch or STV Upside/Downside call will automatically expire at the end of the specified 30/90 day period. The Catalyst Watch will also be automatically removed if share price performance (calculated at market close) exceeds 15% against the direction of the call (unless over-ridden by the analyst). The analyst may also remove a Catalyst Watch or STV call prior to the end of the specified period in a published research note. A Catalyst Watch/STV Upside or Downside call may be different from and does not affect a stock's fundamental equity rating, which reflects a longer-term total absolute return expectation. For purposes of FINRA ratings-distribution-disclosure rules, a Catalyst Watch/STV Upside call corresponds to a buy recommendation and a Catalyst Watch/STV Downside call corresponds to a sell recommendation. Any stock not assigned to a Catalyst Watch Upside, Catalyst Watch Downside, STV Upside, or STV Downside call is considered Catalyst Watch/STV No View. For purposes of FINRA ratings distribution-disclosure rules, we correspond Catalyst Watch/STV No View to Hold in our ratings distribution table for our Catalyst Watch/STV Upside/Downside rating system. However, we reiterate that we do not consider No View to be a recommendation. For all Catalyst Watch/STV Upside/Downside calls, risk exists that the catalyst(s) and associated share-price movement will not materialize as expected.

Pursuant to Comissão de Valores Mobiliários Resolução 20 and ASIC Regulatory Guide 264, Citi is required to disclose whether a Citi related company or business has a commercial relationship with the subject company. Considering that Citi operates multiple businesses in more than 100 countries around the world, it is likely that Citi has a commercial relationship with the subject company.

Securities recommended, offered, or sold by the Firm: (i) are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; (ii) are not deposits or other obligations of any insured depository institution (including Citibank); and (iii) are subject to investment risks, including the possible loss of the principal amount invested. The Product is for informational purposes only and is not intended as an offer or solicitation for the purchase or sale of a security. Any decision to purchase securities mentioned in the Product must take into account existing public information on such security or any registered prospectus. Although information has been obtained from and is based upon sources that the Firm believes to be reliable, we do not guarantee its accuracy and it may be incomplete and condensed. Note, however, that the Firm has taken all reasonable steps to determine the accuracy and completeness of the disclosures made in the Important Disclosures section of the Product. The Firm's research department has received assistance from the subject company(ies) referred to in this Product including, but not limited to, discussions with management of the subject company(ies). Firm policy prohibits research analysts from sending draft research to subject companies. However, it should be presumed that the author of the Product has had discussions with the subject company to ensure factual accuracy prior to publication. Statements and views concerning ESG (environmental, social, governance) factors are typically based upon public statements made by the affected company or other public news, which the author may not have independently verified. ESG factors are one consideration that investors may choose to examine when making investment decisions. All opinions, projections and estimates constitute the judgment of the author as of the date of the Product and these, plus any other information contained in the Product, are subject to change without notice. Prices and availability of financial instruments also are subject to change without notice. Notwithstanding other departments within the Firm advising the companies discussed in this Product, information obtained in such role is not used in the preparation of the Product. Although Citi Research does not set a predetermined frequency for publication, if the Product is a fundamental equity or credit research report, it is the intention of Citi Research to provide research coverage of the covered issuers, including in response to news affecting the issuer. For non-fundamental research reports, Citi Research may not provide regular updates to the views, recommendations and facts included in the reports. Notwithstanding that Citi Research maintains coverage on, makes recommendations concerning or discusses issuers, Citi Research may be periodically restricted from referencing certain issuers due to legal or policy reasons. Where a component of a published trade idea is subject to a restriction, the trade idea will be removed from any list of open trade ideas included in the Product. Upon the lifting of the restriction, the trade idea will either be re-instated in the open trade ideas list if the analyst continues to support it or it will be officially closed. Citi Research may provide different research products and services to different classes of customers (for example, based upon long-term or short-term investment horizons) that may lead to differing conclusions or recommendations that could impact the price of a security contrary to the recommendations in the alternative research product, provided that each is consistent with the rating system for each respective product.

Investing in non-U.S. securities, including ADRs, may entail certain risks. The securities of non-U.S. issuers may not be registered with, nor be subject to the reporting requirements of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. There may be limited information available on foreign securities. Foreign companies are generally not subject to uniform audit and reporting standards, practices and requirements comparable to those in the U.S. Securities of some foreign companies may be less liquid and their prices more volatile than securities of comparable U.S. companies. In addition, exchange rate movements may have an adverse effect on the value of an investment in a foreign stock and its corresponding dividend payment for U.S. investors. Net dividends to ADR investors are estimated, using withholding tax rates conventions, deemed accurate, but investors are urged to consult their tax advisor for exact dividend computations. Investors who have received the Product from the Firm may be prohibited in certain states or other jurisdictions from purchasing securities mentioned in the Product from the Firm.
