Coca-Cola Q2 2026 Earnings Review - Great quarter, long-term forecast largely unchanged

KO reported strong Q2 results, beating VA consensus EPS estimates of $0.93 by $0.04. With strong fundamental drivers behind the beat, there is nothing to pick at. Results were driven by a beat on Organic Sales Growth, which came in at 6.0% (vs. consensus of 3.5%). Organic growth was in turn powered by strong consumption as Global Unit Case Volumes grew 5%, making the beat even more compelling. Operating Income Margin also beat, delivering 35.6%, vs consensus of 35.1%. Yearly guidance for Organic Growth was updated to the top of the range, at 5%. The stock closed at $88, posting a 5% gain.

We update our model to incorporate the latest results, but keep our medium and long-term forecasts, which already reflected our view of KO as a resilient and high-quality compounder, mostly unchanged. We also update our target multiple, from 24.0x to 25.5x, to reflect recent appreciation, which we think will be sustained and has been driven, at least in part, from rotation into the sector (Consumer Staples closed ~2% up during the session, i.e., contributed 2 out of the 5 percentage points of gain for KO). As a result, we have updated our target price. We believe KO will retain its well-earned premium relative to expected OSG, but also believe that the multiple currently has limited room for further expansion.

Investment Implications

We rate Coca-Cola Market-Perform, with a PT of $93. Coke is a high-quality compounder, with compelling offers in Functional Beverages (Protein, Hydration). We forecast 5% and 7% YoY EPS growth NTM and NTM+1, respectively, making us bearish vs. consensus on NTM+1 EPS by 70 bps. We apply a target multiple of 25.5x (old 24.0x) to arrive at our target price.

DETAILS

... (continued)

While today's results were partly enabled by one-time events, such as soft volume comps from a year ago and the impact of the World Cup, they also serve as a reminder of KO's advantaged strategic position. After all, the resiliency comes in the context of numerous headwinds –reduction in SNAP benefits, excise taxes in Mexico, pressured consumers, and commodity inflation, to name a few. But it is no coincidence that KO is successfully navigating these challenges; at the end of the day, you need unmatched global scale to justify that level of sponsorship at the World Cup, and the company's exclusive focus on Beverages continues to play a role in their ability to offer alternative subcategories that capture an ever-evolving consumer demand.

VALUATION METHODOLOGYCoca-Cola Co

We value Coca-Cola using EPS of $3.64 (NTM+1) and a 25.5x P/E multiple (implying $93), cross-checked against EV/EBIT on $17,791 EBIT (NTM+1) at 26.4x (implying $102.13) and a DCF with 7.8% WACC and 2% terminal growth (implying $92.54), with valuation sensitivity primarily driven by Organic Sales Growth.

RISKSCoca-Cola Co

We see the following downside risks to our KO Target Price:

- Decreased consumer demand driven by economic pressure on consumers (e.g., inflation, unemployment)
- Loss of market share to other companies
- Stricter government regulations regarding soft drinks
- A change in consumer preferences, driven by health or environmental concerns
- Commodity costs and/or FX fluctuations
- Changes in Coca-Cola's stances towards M&A or the prioritization of cash in general

And we see the following upside risks to our KO Price Target:

- Faster-than-expected pricing and mix resilience, with limited volume elasticity, drives stronger organic growth and margin than a bear case assumes.
