Read-through from GE Vernova's 2Q26 results

While GE Vernova (GEV.US; covered by Mark Strouse, OW) reported robust new-order growth and strong operating trends, the shares were down pre-market at the time of writing, alongside peers such as Siemens Energy, potentially reflecting concerns that gas-turbine order wins are nearing a plateau and end-of-decade oversupply risk (see note by our European Capital Goods analyst). Yet our Capital Goods analyst highlighted the strong conversion of GEV's slot reservations into orders, with demand/supply fundamentals healthy through the end of the decade, and management also said on the call that they see a clear pathway to grow turbine orders into 2027. Electrification momentum remains strong, with ~30% organic revenue growth YoY and ~4ppt EBITDA margin expansion; management cited substantial growth in switchgear, substations, transformers, and HVDC equipment, and expects 3Q EBITDA margin to expand sequentially. Data-center orders were exceptionally strong at US$5bn (~2x FY25), suggesting demand remains robust despite project-delay concerns. Overall, the results—especially Electrification—reinforce our positive view on order wins, margin expansion, and the data-center opportunity for transmission equipment; we maintain our positive stance on Asian names, with top picks including Hyosung Heavy, Hyundai Electric, and Wasion Holdings.

- Summary of 2Q26 results: GEV reported 2Q pro forma EBITDA about 3% below consensus and revenue about 3% above expectations. The slight EBITDA miss was driven by lower-than-expected profitability at Wind and higher unallocated corporate costs during the quarter, while the core Power and Electrification segments beat. 2Q orders of $24.2bn were above expectations, driven by Power segment orders of $16.7bn and a modest beat from Electrification orders of $6.3bn. See our U.S. Clean Energy analyst's First Take on the company (note). Power segment: New gas power contracts signed were approximately 20GW, above the 10–15GW guided by management and above the high-teens buy-side expectations we had heard going into the print. GEV now expects to end FY26 with at least 125GW of gas power backlog plus SRA, up from at least 110GW previously. The company also announced that the expansion to 20GW of gas power capacity is complete and that it remains on track for 24GW in FY28. Additionally, management noted it is utilizing lean and incremental machinery within the existing factory footprint to reach 30GW by 2030. Please see Table 4 for the change in guidance.
- Why the power equipment stocks slide post GEV results? Our EU Capital analyst attributed this to two reasons in his note on Siemens Energy (note). (1) On new order wins for gas turbines: The analyst notes that, of GEV's 20GW of new gas turbine orders this quarter, 18GW were slot reservation agreements and 2GW were new firm orders, which could be interpreted as “less firm” at first glance. But he argues this framing is misleading. He highlighted that GEV converted 10GW of slot reservation agreements into firm orders this quarter, implying total firm intake of 12GW (10+2), or ~3.7x quarterly deliveries. He adds that the backlog increased from 44GW to 53GW and slot reservations rose from 56GW to 63GW, which he views as consistent with strong demand relative to supply. (2) On capacity expansion for gas turbines: Our EU Capital Good analyst notes that GEV has raised capacity guidance to 30GW by 2030 versus 26GW by 2028 (incl. aeroderivatives). He views this as incremental and not surprising given prior commentary on efficiency-driven output gains, though he says it has revived end-decade over-supply concerns. He estimates global supply vs. orders: FY24 ~50GW vs ~57GW; FY25 ~55GW vs ~100GW; FY26 ~64GW vs ~115–120GW; FY27 ~70GW vs ~110–120GW; FY28 ~80GW vs ~110–120GW. By FY30 he sees 90–95GW+ supply, with backlogs and pricing still supportive.

- Gas turbine orders are not peaking this year: Management mentioned during the earnings call that they see a very clear pathway to continue growing their contracted GW on order beyond this year. While they are guiding for 125GW this year, they are confident that they will see very healthy growth above 125 gigawatts in '27 relative to year end '26. And they are very clearly continuing to grow the contracted backlog for the better part of the next six quarters.
- Momentum remains strong for the electrification segment: The electrification segment posted 64% revenue growth to US$3.6bn in 2Q26 (29% if we exclude the impact from the acquisition of Prolec), and more than a doubling of EBITDA to $671mn. EBITDA margin expanded by almost 4ppt yoy to 18.4%, while orders remained strong at 1.7x of revenue and reached $6.3bn in 2Q26 (+66%). The company guided to modest EBITDA margin expansion sequentially. Management raised its full-year revenue guidance to $14.5-15bn (vs 14-14.5bn). Management noted strength across products with substantial growth in switchgear, substations, transformers and HVDC equipment. We believe the strong orders and margin expansion of GEV show the cycle of HV transmission equipment is ongoing in the U.S. This should have a positive read-through to the Asian names, particularly the Korean power equipment names that will report results in the next two weeks.
- US$5bn of data center orders in 1H26, 2x FY25 level: The company booked $2.7 billion of data center orders in electrification, bringing total segment data center orders to over $5 billion in the first half of '26 (~35%+ of the total $14bn of orders), more than double the full-year 25 level. The company offers a wide range of products to DCs, including power generation equipment, software and controls (like EMS solutions). The company guided to $300 million directional scope per gigawatt today, while they see upside to the number if the company launches more new products like medium voltage UPS, solid state transformers and others (entitlement could be 2-3x what their scope per GW is today). Overall, we believe GEV's strong DC orders show that transmission equipment is not just coming from regulated utilities/grids, while DCs (for both front-of-the-meter and behind-the-meter generation) also post strong demand. Note that Hyundai Electric and Hyosung Heavy only had ~10% of new orders from data centers, and we expect a higher portion of DC orders in the upcoming 2Q results.
- More progress on solid-state transformers: GEV has completed the build-out of 5-MW SST prototype for indoor applications that will be delivered to their first hyperscaler later this year and, in parallel, have started development of a 6-megawatt SST for outdoor applications. Orders may come as early as 2027. For the latest SST developments in China, please refer to our expert call takeaway note.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
